On this highly anticipated studio followup, all talk of the sophomore jinx dissipates with the opening soul-drenched riff rocker "My Way." Although horns are added for extra drama, the three Garza brothers nail this groove as Henry's Stevie Ray Vaughan-fortified guitar powers one of the boys' most fiery performances. Supporter and mentor Willie Nelson joins on the wah-wah driven, Waylon Jennings-styled "Outlaws."

The Collectors

Military builds database of our children.

Our youth are distressingly vulnerable. Suzanne Swift (the local young woman trying to get out of the Army because of the stress of war and sexual harassment) got recruited to the military in the way that too many are: Not having a clear alternative plan for her next step in life, she fell for the military recruiter's lies and misinformation. She was offered a "deal." For enlisting for five years in the Army as an MP (military police), she would not go to Iraq but would get the usual "goodies" the recruiters promote such as money for college.

Little did she know that there are two sorts of MPs – some police military bases while some police checkpoints in Iraq. Little did she know that she would be subjected to constant sexual harassment. Since recruiter promises and enlistment contracts cannot be relied upon, she was very shortly in Iraq.

Young people are vulnerable in another way that is little known: the Pentagon collects data on them.

Without Congressional authorization, the Pentagon has a database estimated to include 90 to 95 percent of all males and females, ages 16 to 25. Though in existence since 2002, knowledge of this database only became public a year ago. The reason for this database: to improve military recruiting capability.

Data gathered include: name, address, email address, phone and cell phone numbers, Social Security number, ethnicity, schools attended, areas of study, birthdate, if males have registered with Selective Service, plus much more. Data comes in from a wide variety of sources such as drivers' license processing, high school and college release of data (unless students opt out), PSAT and SAT scores (unless students refuse release to the military) and the ASVAB (a military entrance and job placement test), unless schools refuse release of data to the military. The Pentagon contracts with a private marketing firm, BeNow, owned by Equifax, a credit rating company, to run the database and to sweep the Internet for information, a task marketing firms are skilled at doing. Youth are often readily persuaded to release private information on the Internet.

Alarmed yet? It gets worse. Youth can contact this database, the Joint Advertising and Marketing Research and Studies office (JAMRS) at 4040 N. Fairfax Drive, Ste. 200, Arlington, VA 22203 to stop JAMRS from mailing military recruiting materials, but they cannot remove themselves or any of their data from the database – or even correct inaccurate information, if they somehow know data is inaccurate.

Even more alarmed? It gets worse. Data can be released to national or international law enforcement agencies, tax authorities and many others without notice of the release. And there is no provision for this database to end at age 26.

Of the five largest events of compromised personal data, two were lost to hacking, three to stolen or lost backup data (New York Times, 5/23). Hacking and theft clearly occur to both governmental and commercial databases. This database exists in both realms, being run by a commercial company which sweeps the Internet daily for information and conveys it to the Pentagon on a weekly basis.

This Pentagon database – at the moment confined to youth, but having no end date – seems on track to become a permanent database on everyone. How attractive to identity thieves is a database with the key information of Social Security numbers, plus birthdates, plus lots of personal information?

It seems to me that the general public is far too silent and accepting of governmental invasions of our privacy, especially when such invasions are done in the name of fighting the "war on terror" or in the name of facilitating military recruitment.

Now that our youth – as young as 16 – are in such an extensive, invasive, unneeded and probably illegal database – for the stated reason of facilitating military recruiting, are we ready to stand up and speak out loudly in protest? How many more Suzanne Swifts will it take?

Please call our senators and representatives to tell them to take action to end this database.

Carol Van Houten is co-coordinator of the Committee for Countering Military Recruitment, a joint project of CALC and Eugene Peaceworks, which works to get out information that military recruiters fail to convey to youth.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RETURN THE FAVOR

Measure 37 is not about fairness. It is about greed and opportunity. The opportunity to wholly dismantle the regulations that for more than 30 years have protected Oregon's resource lands and natural beauty from the feeding frenzy of callous exploitation rampant in other states. And its chief financial backers, the timber, real estate and construction companies, have begun to call the debt.

The recent Wildish and Lone Rock Timber Company claims for $15 million and $11 million, respectively, are just a hint of what's to come from Seneca-Jones, Weyerhaeuser and other long-term corporate landholders. It's certainly predictable, but is it fair for a corporation that has made a fortune from public contracts by extracting gravel and then harvesting timber from land it picked up for a dime to capitalize yet again by being permitted to turn resource land into gentleman estates?

Every year one of the local TV stations airs a Wildish video of pristine natural landscapes called "Hasn't God Been Good to Oregon." I'll not presume to speak for God, but without question, the cities of Eugene and Springfield, Lane County and the state have been very good to Wildish. We can only hope that the Wildish family will see fit to return the favor and, for a reasonable price, if not a charitable donation, make their 1,400 acres of oak and fir woodland overlooking the Middle Fork of the Willamette River a part of Buford Park-Mount Pisgah and the public trust.

Robert Emmons

and Springfield and the county administrator.

It is misleading to imply that LCOG is less accountable to taxpayers. LCOG does not create or collect taxes. Almost all of the revenue that LCOG receives is for specific contracts, which makes it very accountable to the governments that are receiving the services.

Additionally, the quotation of the total travel budget implied it was excessive. LCOG's single largest travel expense is for Senior & Disabled staff to visit people that need care that do not have mobility, an expense that is necessary to provide needed services to the elderly and disabled.

The concluding sentence of the article stated that "LCOG staff recommended that LCOG threaten to seize control of the required local approval of the West Eugene Parkway." The accurate report is that members of the LCOG Board, all elected officials, assumed their responsibility to ensure that the metro area continues to receive federal money for transportation projects. The board's action was not about the WEP.

The real question is why would a publication that makes Eugene a better place by providing detailed information about local issues try to discredit a public agency by publishing misleading information? LCOG does not have taxing authority and exists to provide cost effective services to local governments as well as the elderly and disabled citizens of Lane County. EW loses credibility by blatantly misreporting information and making unfounded and inaccurate assertions.

Robert Swank & Warren Roe
Eugene

INACCURATE REPORT

Eugene Weekly is an important alternative source of information and perspective for local issues. However, its credibility is compromised when the information reported is grossly inaccurate. Alan Pittman's article in the July 13 issue titled "LCOG'S Fat" is full of false information and assertions.

The LCOG executive director's salary package is about $123,000, which is 25 percent less than the $164,000 stated in the article. For comparison's sake, this is substantially less than the compensation of the city managers of Eugene EDITORS NOTE: Salary numbers, including benefits, are from page 40 of LCOG's 2006-07 Work Program and Budget.

FEAR FACTOR

Dear EWEB: What's with the barricades? I thought you were going through a strike, not a siege. Union fangs that produced bloody strikes like the Longshoremen Strike in 1934, the image your fences invoke, were pulled long ago and history tells that provocation was shared by both sides in that era of labor history. I assume you're not up to shenanigans so what is it? Don't you trust the folks you hired? What is the fear that causes to erect barricades?

I was walking past the picket line on the 10th and stopped briefly to talk to your struck employees. My impression is that you have nothing to fear. They are good folks. The guys I met all possessed professional and personal integrity: they are skilled tradesmen and, because of their work, unseen friends, good neighbors and upstanding community members.

Did these integrities cause you to hire them in the first place? After meeting these pickets I'm willing to bet that if something untoward happened on their watch and in your parking lot they would do the right thing and stop it. After all, they are not goons, they are good people.

EWEB, I am also a rate payer. That your workers have been without a contract for six months is inexcusable. That you are quibbling over health benefits is understandable; it is a popular arena for employee employer conflict these days. But EWEB, your market is Eugene. Use something other than the standard business model for drawing your lines in the sand and, dear God/Goddess, naming your battle. Trust your employees. Deal from a position of good faith. Defy popular business models and do what is right for not just your customers but your employees too as happy employees do better work. Above all, re-evaluate your posturing and resolve the dispute to the benefit of your community.

SEARCH FOR MEANING

I think it was in the movie Cabaret, Liza Minnelli's character, a wildly stressed out singer, invited her boyfriend to see one of the places that were special to her. It was where trains ran by and was noisy. She showed him that if one waited until a train was really, really close, one could scream at the top of her lungs and no one would hear. She moved over and invited him to try it. It was her present to him.

I was at Sunday's Oregon Country Fair, when the realization hit me that what I was really looking for was just such a place. Not a place to relax, not a place to listen to fine music, which the fair has in abundance, but instead a place to let out my intense ... well, what she was letting out.

Her country, Germany, was about to be taken over by murderous war criminals, her life was a desperate struggle to find meaning and in her heart she knew it was all downhill from there. Lives were individual battlegrounds, wars to survive.

To paraphrase Bruce Springsteen, my country is in ruins, my eyes don't see glory but despair, and I see the future as, not a present, but a disaster. There is no "we" anymore in my country. Maybe there never was. I doubt my need to scream is an isolated one.

SPINNING COMPASS

Yesterday (7/10), I heard an interview with a U.S. military interrogator from Iraq. I was shocked, slapped in the face with alarm at the realities of which he spoke. The soldier replied in monotone yet straightforward explanations of the techniques of torture i.e. vicious dogs snarling and barking close to the blindfolded faces of prisoners, sleep deprivation on top of forced positions held for hours, and worse, much worse.

The military interrogator spoke of his and his co-patriots' loss of their moral compass due to the deviant nature of their work, and their own isolation from friends and family. "Loss of moral compass." These words shook me and reminded me of people's loss of values through isolation and propaganda and the resulting suffering through torture of innocents throughout history including my own people's suffering in the holocaust.

Who is lowered by torture in the pursuit of information? The torturer sacrifices his own humanity. If we allow torture are we a nation that is losing our moral compass? In the terrorizing of those captives and behind every act of torture is the body of people of each nation who condone it by their silence.

A military doctor on the same show stated that suspects are more likely to lie, to say anything to stop being tortured and just as likely or more likely to give information if the interrogation is carried out with a modicum of humane treatment and dialogue.

Torture of another being is terror. Are we fighting terror or embodying it? If the U.S. tortures suspects, are we a light among nations? A beacon of freedom and justice? Or are we a fallen nation, lost without a moral compass, fallen to a place of sadistic depravity of other horror-rendering nations throughout history?

TURKEY OF A TAX

Voters beware. The powers that be are about to pull a fast one. The county commissioners have a nifty plan to put an income tax for individuals and businesses on the November ballot. They say it will be capped at 2 percent. Have you ever known a tax that remained capped at its original level?

The Register-Guard in a recent editorial said that the people pitching this proposal shouldn't bother wasting time or resources trying to reach voters who are hopelessly misinformed or unalterably opposed. Well put me down as both then I guess, because I don't want to pay an additional tax for the pleasure of seeing more resources mismanaged by those powers that be. Anyone who's a renter in this county should also know that this tax would primarily hit you, as the current proposal provides a rebate to homeowners for 75 percent of the proposed tax. No other county in Oregon has such a tax, which means those other counties somehow are able to manage their finances without resorting to an income tax.

There is a crisis in Lane County, but it's a crisis of inadequate leadership, lack of imagination and abysmal management by those elected to represent the people of this county. Voters should tell them where to stuff this turkey.

END EUTHANASIA

Animals deserve to live! Did you know that based on current statistics, more than 2,500 cats and dogs will be euthanized at our county's animal shelter in 2006? In addition, there may be hundreds more put down at Greenhill Humane Society.

Although some of these deaths are the humane choice for sick or injured animals, the vast majority of euthanasia in Lane County is performed on healthy animals capable of living a happy life as someone's companion. They may not be the purebred puppy or cute little kitten you can buy at the mall, but they are living creatures who deserve our help.

Animal euthanasia is a symptom of two problems. First, we have a long-term overpopulation of dogs and cats due to lack of education and lack of freely available spay/neuter services. Second, our local shelters are functioning with extremely limited resources. LCARA has space for only 30 dogs and 40 cats. Greenhill is similarly sized.

With a constant flow of new stray and abandoned animals, euthanasia becomes standard operating procedure. At LCARA, a stray pet without a tag may be put down before the owner has a chance to find and retrieve her/him. At Greenhill, a family pet given up for adoption may be put down because she/he is deemed to be un-adoptable.

SARA is one of the most active local animal welfare groups (www.sarasavesanimals.org). On July 20 a national expert, Nathan Winograd, will visit our area and present a discussion titled "Building a No-Kill Community."

His website (www.nokillsolutions.com) has a lot of good information on the subject of animal euthanasia. Winograd's visit is a great step in the right direction and I encourage our local elected leaders, shelter staff, volunteer organizations, and new volunteers to work together and find ways to end senseless animal euthanasia in Lane County.

Old Glory

Uber-conservatives flog their wedgies.

June was a newsy month. Rush Limbaugh's latest efforts to pump himself up took the Comedic Muse prize. Yes, yes, we all hoped he'd face stiff penalties and do hard time – good ol' LIMP-baugh, what an upstanding guy. Then we had Congress's frisky roll in the hay with their two hot constitutional amendments. Thank Goddess those bans on gay marriage and flag burning failed. Whew!

But don't get too comfy – you can bet your rainbow bumper sticker that the queer-hating flag-wavers aren't appeased. Soon as the Repuglicans need another wedge issue to muster religious right fervor, they'll be baaaaack.

And oh, how the uber-conservatives love to trot out their two big wedgies – as if defending the flag and the sanctity of marriage will distract us from the sorry state of health care and education and the horrors in Darfur. Not to mention Iraq. Seems to work for them.

I wonder if trashing queer people and flag burners at the same time is part of their sinister strategy. We've all heard bigots justify discrimination against lesbian, gay, bi, and trans people by lumping us in with pedophilia, polygamy and bestiality. At least when they call us perverts you get where they're coming from. But lumping us in with the flag burners? What's up with that?

Don't get me wrong, I don't have a problem with flag burners – not that I know any. But it's not like they're oppressed. Nobody has to advocate for their rights. Unless you count the ACLU. Or the First Amendment.

But get real. Other than a slap-on-the-wrist arrest here and there and a smattering of oddball death threats, what problems do flag burners face, anyway? It's not like they live in some kind of flag burning closet where they're afraid to be themselves. It's not really a big issue for them. When was the last time you heard a rumor about some major celebrity or politician or White House correspondent being a flag burner?

If they really feel the need to connect with other flag burners, let them form some kind of support group.

Can you imagine?

Hello. My name is Butch and I'm a flag burner.

I first noticed the urge when I was a little kid. I'd go up into the attic with my best friend and pretend, but we didn't actually DO anything, not till much later, anyway. In high school someone said it was sick to think about it all the time so I told my counselor. I guess that was the wrong person to confide in, but how could I have known she'd have a "moral and religious" problem with it? Anyhow, she told my parents and all hell broke loose. They were going to throw me out of the house unless I agreed to go to one of those camps.

But camp just made it more intense. I thought about it morning and night. EVERY morning and night. Day in and day out, up the pole, down the pole – it was torture!

Then I went to college. Whoa boy. Talk about temptation. In my dorm lots of people discussed it, right out in the open. Said it was nothing to be ashamed of.

I knew by then not to mention that kind of talk to my parents. They were already convinced college was filling my head with rebellious ideas. As if I hadn't been like this all my life. I guess I'd have to say I was born this way, but I also choose it. I choose to be myself and not be ashamed.

Hey wait a minute! I get the picture. Same-sex couples and our friends who think we should have the freedom to marry actually do have something in common with flag burners. I mean if we aren't free to express ourselves, what kind of a country is this?

Somebody hand me a lighter.

TAX CUT WILL BITE SCHOOLS

A broad coalition of Oregon parent, senior, teacher, business, union and good government groups have joined to get an early jump on defeating a tax cut measure that they say could decimate the state.

The Defend Oregon Coalition expects the "Tax Payer Bill of Rights" (TABOR) constitutional amendment to have enough signatures to qualify for the November ballot. If passed, the measure would limit tax increases to inflation plus population growth.

The simple formula could appear reasonable to tax opponents, but the coalition argues that it will force deep cuts to schools, public safety and other government services. The formula is "bad math" that fails to account for the fact that the government's huge health care costs are rising faster than inflation, as are the demands of the growing prison and senior populations, the coalition says. If TABOR had been in effect since 1990, it would have cut state funding for schools and other public services by 25 percent, according to a state analysis.

A similar measure in Colorado resulted in that state dropping in rank to near last for K-12 and higher education spending and high school graduation rates, according to a study by the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities. After 13 years, Colorado voters voted last year to suspend the tax limit.

PEACE PEDALERS

They are veterans from five wars, ranging in age from their 20s to their 60s, and they're fed up with America's oil addiction, which they feel is driving the current wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. They say that we need to make personal and community choices — like shifting away from cars and toward bikes, and localizing our economies — to reduce our dependence on oil and contribute to world peace. And they plan to do something fun about it.

On July 25, about 20 veterans will begin a two-week, 350-mile bicycle journey from Eugene to Seattle, where they will attend the National Veterans for Peace Convention Aug. 10-13.

Veteran Brian Willson on his three-wheeled handcycle

Local veteran Gordon Sturrock, 48, says that the ride is buoyed by a spirit of cooperation that veterans share. "In the military, you're taught to depend on your partners," he said. "We are very determined to do this, and we work together and support each other. We're trying to change the world."

Disabled Vietnam War veterans Brian Willson and Lane Anderson, both California peace activists, initiated the idea for the ride. Willson, a double-amputee, will power a three-wheeled handcycle; Anderson, who has arthritic knees, will ride a bicycle that provides extra bursts of hand-generated power. Several bio-fueled vehicles will accompany the ride.

The vets will participate in community events at 15 stops along the way. The kick-off will be a peace conference at the mini-amphitheater at the end of North Adams Street in Eugene at 6 pm July 24. Guest speakers will include World War II veteran Edgar Pears, local environmental activist Josh Schlossberg, Pfc. Suzanne Swift's mother Sara Rich, Vietnam veteran Dr. Jack Dresser, Willson and Sturrock.

BIKE HYBRID

Seen the Al Gore PowerPoint movie and want a vehicle that gets even better mileage than a Prius?

How about a hybrid electric/human powered recumbent bike? Last week at the Oregon Country Fair, EcoSpeed, a small Portland company, was showing off lightweight kits to transform a Burley or other recumbent into a high performance human/electric hybrid that gets the energy equivalent of about 1,500 to 3,000 miles per gallon.

The kits add about 20 pounds and $2,000 to the weight and cost of a recumbent. The electric motor, powered by a small but powerful lithium ion battery, takes advantage of the bike's full range of gearing and can power uphill with minimal pedaling for 16 miles before recharging. Use the electric power assist just for shorter hills and acceleration and the battery has a 60 mile range, according to the company's website, ecospeed.net.

Of course, you could just pedal and burn more doughnuts while taking advantage of Eugene's extensive off-road system of bike trails, where such powered vehicles are banned. But EcoSpeed does offer a cool, practical option for those who have a longer road commute and could lure a few people out of their spewing gas guzzlers. — Alan Pittman

GREEN CITY BUILDINGS

On July 10, the Eugene City Council unanimously adopted a "green building" policy. Effective immediately, all city-owned and occupied buildings must be constructed and maintained in environmentally and economically sustainable ways, in compliance with the Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) standards. Eugene now joins the cities of Chicago, Portland and Seattle, as well as the state of Washington, in making the green building commitment.

Under the resolution, all new city buildings 10,000 sq. ft. or bigger must earn a "silver" certification from the U.S. Green Building Council and aim for a higher rating — gold or platinum — when funding is available. "We're looking at this as a developmental stage where we implement this, learn about it, and hopefully upgrade later," said Facilities Division Manager Glen Svendsen.

For smaller new buildings and maintenance of existing buildings, LEED standards will serve as a guideline. "We keep trying to stress the importance of the existing buildings as having the most environmental benefits," Svendsen said. "The challenge will be to get them into compliance. We may build a new building every five years, but the existing buildings are there, giving off greenhouse gases and not being fun to work in, all the time."

The resolution won't compel private and state builders to comply with LEED standards, but some have chosen to do just that. The Lillis Business Complex on the UO campus has a silver certificate, the Royal Caribbean building in Springfield earned a gold, and the new Slocum Orthopedic Center is going for silver. The Green Building Advisory Group, which makes recommendations to the council, is mulling over the idea of offering incentives to private builders for getting LEED certified, said city planner Keli Osborn.

Under the LEED criteria, builders get points for buying locally, siting in dense areas, reducing waste water, maximizing energy efficiency and using non-toxic materials, among other factors. But a silver certification only requires compliance with 40 to 47 of the 85 criteria, so the city won't be under much pressured to, say, build in a high density area — which only earns one point.

The green building resolution will immediately apply to two city projects, the publicly funded Whole Foods parking lot and the renovation or reconstruction of City Hall. Svendsen admitted that the parking lot may not be LEED certifiable "for technical reasons," and may need a waiver which, thanks to an amendment from Councilor David Kelly, the council — rather than the city manager — would have to approve.

UO HOUSING QUESTIONS STILL LINGER

The Oregon State Board of Higher Education, in a 10-1 vote, approved the UO's sale of Westmoreland Family Housing to private developer Michael O'Connell on July 14. Board members also asked the university to create a housing plan to accommodate more students, including non-traditional students, and report back to the board on that effort in early 2007.

But some questions about the UO's motives, the state board's process and city zoning laws remain, and at least one nonprofit plans to challenge the sale in court.

Eugeneans for Affordable Housing's David Zupan argues that the state board didn't properly involve the public in the process, as required by state law. "There's a breakdown in the democratic process here," he said, noting that hundreds of UO students and alumni, the UO Senate, members of four Eugene neighborhood associations and a half-dozen local politicians opposed the sale. "It's pretty ironic, given the amount of feedback to the board, that they would basically ignore it."

Another legal battleground is zoning. Because the Westmoreland property is currently zoned for nonprofit use, its conversion to a for-profit use will be subject to a City Council vote. "We intend to lobby the city to oppose this rezoning, particularly in regards to the adverse impact that this will have on the city's low-cost housing stock," Zupan said.

Last November, UO administrators announced that two local affordable housing nonprofits, the Metropolitan Affordable Housing Corp. and St. Vincent de Paul Society of Lane County, were interested in buying Westmoreland. That never happened, said St. Vincent Director Terry McDonald, because the UO held firm to a selling price of at least $18 million — which virtually guaranteed that rents would not remain affordable. "It was sticker shock," McDonald said. "The university wasn't willing to accept anything lower than $18 million. They made it clear from the get-go that their primary interest was in getting the money ... The concern I have is that we will have more pressure on the bottom for affordable housing."

On July 18, Gov. Ted Kulongoski visited the UO to promote affordable education for every Oregonian. "A great way to do that would be to stop the sale of Westmoreland," Zupan said. "You couldn't ask for a better example of diversity and affordability."

CHABAREK TO TRIAL

Municipal Court Judge Alan Leiman denied a motion to dismiss the trespassing charge against anti-war activist Peter Chabarek, who was arrested after he refused to stop handing out anti-war leaflets in the Eugene Hilton during Sen. Gordon Smith's speech to the Rotary Club on Feb. 21. The ruling hinged on the question of whether the public had been invited to use the Hilton lobby for non-commercial purposes during the political event.

Chabarek's attorney, Brian Michaels, filed a motion to dismiss the charge on May 12, suggesting that the arrest had violated Chabarek's free speech rights. Michaels argued that Smith's presence had made the lobby a public forum, and Chabarek's leafletting was protected free speech under the Oregon Constitution. In early July the Hilton manager agreed to drop the charge against Chabarek, but the city refused, Michaels said.

Assistant City Prosecutor C. Michael Arnold, in a written response, argued that the Hilton lobby was not, in fact, serving as a public forum during Sen. Smith's event because the Rotary had leased the adjoining ballroom.

Judge Leiman agreed with Arnold's ruling on July 13 that neither the Hilton nor the Rotary Club invited the general public to use the hotel lobby during the senator's visit. The case will advance to trial, and the outcome will likely set a precedent for future scenarios in which protesters show up at political functions held on private property. — Kera Abraham

LOGGING DELAYED

Much to the relief of plaintiffs in a lawsuit against the U.S. Forest Service, the timber company that bought the rights to clearcut a roadless forest burned in the 2002 Biscuit Fire has agreed to hold off on logging for a few more weeks. That will give a federal judge in San Francisco time to consider a multi-state case challenging the Bush administration's repeal of the Clinton-era Roadless Area Conservation Rule.

In a letter to the Oregon Attorney General's Office and a federal attorney, a lawyer for Silver Creek Timber Co. agreed to delay logging in the Mike's Gulch roadless area until Aug. 4. The company had previously indicated that it would start cutting as early as July 4, before U.S. Magistrate Judge Elizabeth Laporte hears arguments challenging the Bush administration's new roadless policy on Aug. 1.

"We're certainly happy to have that respite, and we're glad that Judge Laporte will be able to more fully hear this challenge on Aug. 1," said Rolf Skar of the Siskiyou Project, one of the plaintiffs in the case. "We eagerly await the outcome of that."

Silver Creek's attorney maintains that the delay was in no way a concession to opponents of the logging — from tree-sitting protesters to a dozen environmental groups to the governor of Oregon, who balk at the idea of logging in previously protected designated roadless areas in national forests.

But Gov. Ted Kulongoski takes some credit for the delay. He had filed a request for a temporary restraining order on July 6, in an attempt to compel the court to hear the case before Silver Creek started logging. The court immediately scheduled a hearing for the morning of July 7. Silver Creek then agreed to delay logging, and the governor withdrew the TRO request.

"I am pleased that our legal strategy has led to an agreement by the Silver Creek Timber Company to stop — for now — this unwise and unnecessary timber sale in Mike's Gulch," Kulongoski stated in a press release.

The states of Oregon, Washington, California and New Mexico, along with a half-dozen conservation groups, are challenging the Bush administration's decision to scrap the Clinton-era roadless rule, which was crafted with input from about two million Americans, and replace it with a much more industry-friendly policy. They argue that new policy was illegally adopted without involving the public, as required under the National Environmental Policy Act.

Clinton's rule made roadless areas in national forests off-limits to logging. Bush's rule essentially gives the Forest Service carte blanche to log in roadless areas, which comprise about 60 million acres in national forests. — Kera Abraham

RECYCLING PHONE BOOKS

Looking for a simple way to help the environment? Recycle your old Dex phone book between 1 and 4 pm Saturday, July 22 at the Valley River Center, in Gottschalks Court near Euphoria Chocolate.

Dex, KKNU radio and BRING Recycling have partnered to recycle outdated phone books and raise money for BRING. Dex will donate $1 per phone book, up to a maximum of $1,000, to fund BRING Recycling's new Planet Improvement Center.

Those unable to attend Saturday's recycling event can still recycle outdated phone books. The simplest way is to put outdated directories into curbside recycling bins.

• Oregon community journalism lost one of its stalwarts recently with the death of Anne Thomas of Creswell. Her career spanned 50 years of writing, editing, teaching, and mentoring of young journalists. She died July 6 at the age of 73 from complications of lung cancer, and her memorial gathering last week in Cottage Grove packed the First Presbyterian Church with friends, family, congregation members and former co-workers. The "small but mighty" scribe wrote for daily papers in California and Oregon earlier in her career but was best known locally as staff writer and editor of the Cottage Grove Sentinel and Springfield News (a story on her life and career can be found at www.cgsentinel.com). She earned a master's in journalism from UO and wrote award-winning stories about the arts, entertainment, politics, crime and the environment. She will be missed by all of us who knew her, not only for her dedication, knowledge and professionalism, but also for her kind and playful nature. She was a seeker of truth and beauty who found it wherever she looked, whether it was in local politics, live theater and galleries, the music of Pink Floyd, her pet cats, or the wit of Jon Stewart.

• County Commissioner Bobby Green is grumbling that the West Eugene Parkway should be a regional transportation decision, and not just a Eugene decision. Let's get real. Residents of Springfield, Glenwood, Coburg and Creswell who drive to Veneta or the coast can just catch Belt Line at I-5 and zip right over to West 11th, bypassing most of the congestion. It's Eugene's baby for the most part. And ODOT appears open to highway improvement projects that will ease the traffic trouble spots in west Eugene, along with David Cox of the FHA, according to the R-G. Everyone wins when the WEP dies. Let's give credit to Mayor Piercy and the city councilors and ODOT staffers who recognized that the WEP is an expensive, destructive, unnecessary and explicitly illegal boondoggle that should have been scrapped from transportation planning 30 years ago. The voters were not given the whole story either time they voted on the WEP. And the most important votes of recent years have been those for council and mayoral candidates who stated loud and often that they opposed the proposed freeway through the wetlands. Most recently was Alan Zelenka, overwhelmingly elected in May to succeed David Kelly. Both he and Kelly told the voters they opposed the WEP, as did Betty Taylor, Bonny Bettman, Andrea Ortiz and Kitty Piercy. Now community leaders on both sides of this issue finally can move past the flawed WEP to real solutions for transportation

• Good of the Lane County commissioners to finally agree to turn on the power at Morse Plaza, where members of the Wayne Morse Youth Program have been valiantly trying to make their voices heard on Saturdays. But the commishes ought to be ashamed that, following the advice of County Management Services Director David Suchart, they had cut it off for more than three months — under the ridiculous assumption that young adults reciting poetry was somehow responsible for people selling drugs, peeing and littering in the plaza. Especially ironic that this happened under the statuesque watch of Morse himself, a passionate protector of free speech. Now, the county wants to charge the youth $10 per use and a $100 deposit, which they'll lose if people deal drugs or litter while the kids are free-speakin'. What twisted logic.

ROSE WILDE

She was born in Cottage Grove, but after her parents split up, Rose Wilde lived with her mother and went to school in Maryland. She returned to Oregon for summers on her father's garlic farm in Horton. Wilde studied anthropology at Rice and spent a year with Americorps in Washington, D.C. "I was providing support for families where a parent had HIV," she notes. She moved to Eugene in 1999 and worked for four years at Womenspace. "My job was education, working with youth around domestic violence," she says. "I went to every high school, every year." Wilde returned to school in 2004, commuting to OSU for a masters in the Public Health program. There she taught a class on HIV and also became an activist in the statewide union for graduate student employees. At her graduation in June, Wilde was honored with an Award for Excellence in Service. She'll be looking for work at a non-profit or a research operation following an August wedding. "Rose is extra bright, she can execute, and she is really fun," says Margo Schaefer of Womenspace. "Whoever gets her is one lucky organization."

The city of Eugene has released five binders full of documents from the civil suits by victims of police sex abuse. The documents include the sworn depositions of 16 current and former officers and police chiefs and the EPD HR manager. The city heavily censored some of the pages.

Files show how EPD failed to stop Magaña.

BY ALAN PITTMAN

Are you a high-school dropout who used meth, cocaine and marijuana, sold drugs and was arrested for burglary, public urination and lying to police, and have a shady expunged juvenile record? Did you get rejected by another police department and score in the bottom 5 percent on the SAT? Then you, too, could qualify as a Eugene police officer.

Roger Magaña and Juan Lara had these disqualifications but were hired by the Eugene Police Department (EPD) anyway, to the department's lasting shame. Magaña was convicted in 2004 and sentenced to 94 years in prison for raping, sexually abusing, sodomizing, kidnapping and/or harassing a dozen women over seven years as a Eugene police officer. Lara was convicted of a much smaller sexual spree of harassment, coercion, public indecency and official misconduct and served two years in jail.

The city of Eugene has denied that any of its personnel did anything wrong in hiring, supervising and disciplining the two officers. But Magaña is estimated to have had more than 40 alleged victims over six years, and questions remain concerning how such a massive crime spree could have happened under EPD officers' noses.

Det. Scott McKee recalls that as the Magaña/Lara criminal investigation grew shockingly bigger in 2003, he talked with then Chief Thad Buchanan about concerns that others were involved, complicit or turned a blind eye. "Jesus, do you think there's anybody else?"

After settling lawsuits with 14 of Magaña and Lara's victims for a total of $5 million, the city has begun releasing a mountain of court documents, including sworn depositions, that shed new light on that question. The documents reveal a pattern of questionable hiring and officers quickly dismissing complaints without formal investigation and without telling Internal Affairs (IA) or supervisors, and apparently pressuring victims to recant.

Hiring

Would Magaña and Lara be hired today as police officers, given their past resumes?

"I think he [Magaña] would" be hired, said EPD Human Resources Manager Helen Towle in her deposition.

Lara "probably would get hired again tomorrow," said former Eugene Police Chief Jim Hill in his deposition.

When Magaña was hired a decade ago, a background investigation revealed that Magaña had twice been arrested for burglary, but never charged. McKee, the lead criminal investigator for the Magaña and Lara cases, later found troubling evidence of a possible earlier crime when Magaña was about 17.

The record of that juvenile crime had been legally expunged and destroyed by request just before Magaña was hired. But after Magaña's conviction, McKee said he talked to a woman who said she had gone to high school with Magaña. She alleged that Magaña had been caught in a violent sexual assault of a young woman in the bushes outside a teen party.

McKee testified that he has not been able to confirm the incident. Two other party-goers said they didn't recall it, the woman now doesn't return his calls, he was unable to find any records and has only the first name of the alleged victim. "I'm at a dead end," he said.

HR Manager Towle said the EPD also investigated a "rumor" that surfaced after Magaña was hired in 1995 as a police trainee. Co-workers of Magaña in the city's Public Works Department alleged that Magaña was living beyond his means and could be selling drugs. A police sergeant went to public works and "the people confronted backed down," Towle said.

Lara's background investigation also revealed an arrest record. In 1994, he was caught peeing in a park with friends and lying to police about having beer in his car when he was 20 years old. Lara told EPD officials that he suspected the incident was why the Seattle Police Department rejected him for a job.

Lara also admitted a high school history of drug use and sales. He said he used cocaine or meth approximately 20 to 25 times and marijuana five times. He admitted that he sold cocaine at parties about 10 times. Lara also admitted to driving while drunk or high, teenage shoplifting and resigning a job under pressure, according to documents.

Lara dropped out of high school but later obtained a GED, meeting state minimum education requirements for officers. Plaintiffs' lawyers asked whether Towle was aware that Magaña had a 2.0 GPA at a community college and had scored in the bottom 5 percent on the SAT.

Towle said such low academics would not disqualify a candidate for an officer job.

Hill said he was impressed with Magaña's later "stellar" military record in the Marines. "He's kind of typical of some of the folks we see who did some goofy things in high school that they are not proud of," Hill said.

Officers described hiring the right people as a vital way for the department to prevent officer abuse in a town where police patrol by themselves without constant supervision. "We're supposed to have high moral character so that they can trust us to run around in the city," officer Mel Thompson said.

Mystery Woman

After Magaña was hired, fellow officers rejected complaints from his victims.

One previously unreported incident occurred in 1999 and involved a "mystery woman" from Florence who was a suspected heroin user and prostitute.

Officer Larry Crompton testified that the "very attractive" woman told him that she had a romantic relationship with Magaña. She said Magaña hurt her emotionally because she found he was just using her for information.

Crompton said the woman — he couldn't remember her name — told him that she had told others about the relationship and Magaña had found out she was talking. "She said the next thing that she knew she had two of his buddies, indicating two other police officers, who showed up at her door and told her to — I don't remember the exact words — but more or less to keep her mouth shut."

Asked if the two officers were threatening the woman to be silent, Crompton replied, "I don't think there's really too many ways to take that."

Crompton said he was concerned and confronted Magaña with the information. Magaña admitted he knew the woman but denied romantic involvement. He admitted that two officers had talked to her to tell her to stop spreading false rumors.

Magaña "put it all at rest" by explaining the woman was one of his police informants, Crompton said. He said he was "satisfied" with the explanation but thought Magaña behaved in a "tacky" manner with the woman. Crompton said he did not report the incident to Internal Affairs or his superiors because he thought it was his discretion to decide the complaint wasn't credible.

Officer Mel Thompson said he was Magaña's "pal" and one of the officers who talked to the mystery woman about spreading rumors. He said he could not remember her name nor the name of the other officer with him. He said the two officers confronted the woman during an arrest in an alley and gave her a "spiel" about wrongly harming an officer's reputation. Thompson denied threatening the woman and said she recanted the accusation. He said she admitted that she made it only because Magaña arrested her.

Thompson said he did not officially report the incident to IA or his superiors but said with the Rapid Deployment Unit, "it was a known within the team ... including the supervisor."

McKee said he didn't believe anyone in the department was involved or "complicit" in Magaña and Lara's crimes. But McKee said that, unlike the two officers, he would have officially reported the woman's accusation to supervisors. He described the confrontation between the two officers and the accusing woman as "not a pleasant exchange."

But McKee said he was too busy preparing for the Magaña trial to pursue the woman's identity, investigate other witnesses or look for corroborating documents. "The obvious follow-up related to the conduct, the subsequent conduct alleged involving the follow-up and kind of hush-hush communication and visit — I just overlooked that as an investigative lead, I guess.”

Former Chief Hill said that during his 30 years in the department, it was always the policy that officers were to report even “flaky” accusations of serious misconduct to supervisors and IA. Officers did not have the discretion to simply dismiss such allegations as not credible, Hill said. “There would have to be a complete and timely investigation ... with documentation. Absolutely.”

Similar Complaint Dismissed

In a similar incident, a suspected prostitute and heroin addict told officer Gerald Webber that another heroin user and suspected prostitute was having sex with Magaña to get out of arrest warrants.

Webber said he thought the other heroin user was lying about having sex with the officer. “There’s no way.”

Webber said he asked Magaña about the report. “He flatly denied it,” Webber said. But he noted Magaña appeared “nervous” and “weird” about the accusation.

Webber said he also told his supervisor Lt. Jim Fields about the accusation against Magaña. He said he told Fields he believed the accusation was a “bogus” tactic to get police to avoid arresting her for fear of false accusations.

Webber said he proposed to Fields that officers target the accuser with a sting operation. “If [the woman] is going to accuse cops of misconduct, then fine. Let’s go down there in uniform, proposition her, and then arrest her.”

Webber said Fields rejected the idea because it could get officers in trouble.

Fields, also testifying under oath, has a markedly different description of the conversation.

He emphatically denied that Webber ever told him about a specific allegation of Magaña trading sex for dropping arrests. “Absolutely not.”

“I asked him [Webber] point blank, is there an officer out there messing with prostitutes that shouldn’t be on patrol? I want to know, and you have an obligation to tell me if there is. And he said he didn’t know of anything like that.”

After he retired in 2002, Fields said he heard Webber was claiming that he reported the Magaña accusation to him. He said he called McKee and told him, “if this is being said, I demand that somebody be put on a polygraph because that is a damn lie if somebody said they said that to me.”

Fields said Webber did not mention Magaña. He said Webber told him that he thought prostitutes were so brazen that they would proposition uniformed officers in a sting. Fields said he told him not to do that because it would hurt uniformed officers’ “credibility” if the public saw them doing business with prostitutes. Fields said he told IA and many other supervisors about the conversation and the claim that prostitutes were brazen enough to proposition uniformed officers.

Webber said Magaña later said that the woman “is saying the same thing about you” and agreed it was a tactic to avoid enforcement.

Webber said he later arrested the woman on a warrant and confronted her about the accusations as he drove her to the jail. He told her it was “pretty low” that she was “getting somebody in trouble that’s out there doing his job every night,” Webber said. “She completely recanted.”

Later after Magaña was indicted, the woman emerged as one of the officer’s most frequent victims, with dozens of accusations of forced sex. Webber said, “All of a sudden I thought, oh crap. Everything [the woman] said that night is true.”

Other Complaints Rejected

One of the earliest allegations against Magaña came from within the department. A 17-year-old woman working as a police cadet alleged that Magaña touched her sexually against her will. The frightened cadet reported the incident to officer Jennifer Bills and a non-sworn EPD community service staffer named Richard Bremer.

McKee said Bills told him that she reported the incident to her supervisor at the time, Lt. Rick Siel. McKee said he would have formally investigated a similar complaint if he had been the supervisor, but it appears that Seal and Bills did not.

In 2001, a different woman complained that Magaña had stopped her and tried to romantically pick her up. EPD Sgt. Bill Harris ruled the complaint unfounded. But an auditor hired by the city noted evidence that Magaña lied about the incident. The auditor criticized the handling of the complaint.

Former Chief Hill testified that Harris was “somewhat lax,” in his supervision of officers.

But Harris himself faulted Magaña for the incident in a later performance appraisal, noting his failure to run the woman for warrants or fill out a contact card. “He [Magaña] needs to ensure that he conducts personal stops in a manner that supports his reasons for the stop,” Harris wrote.

In 2002 a woman whom officer Ryan Wolgamott was citing for marijuana possession, “just matter-of-factly stated that officer Magaña had raped her.”

“I was like ‘Great,’ and I just kept writing” the citation, Wolgamott said. The officer said he considered what the woman said “garbage” because of her digressive speech, which appeared to indicate she was mentally ill or on drugs.

The woman also said she had reported the incident at City Hall but nothing was done, so Wolgamott assumed it might already have been investigated. He said he also assumed another officer standing next to him heard the statement, but that officer later denied it. Wolgamott did not report the accusation to IA or supervisors. “I didn’t see a need for anything,” he said.

The woman, who suffers from mental illness, later emerged as another of Magaña’s most frequent victims.

Officer William Reimers, an EPD officer for seven years who now is an officer in Boise, said he also received a sex abuse complaint about Magaña but dismissed it. Reimers said a drug informant told him “she witnessed Magaña grab her friend’s buttocks in a sexy manner.”

Reimers said he trusted the woman to tell the truth for drug arrests but found the information about Magaña not credible and did not report it or investigate. “At that time it sounded like a drug-addicted prostitute upset with an officer,” Reimers said. “It was my discretion as to whether I believed something was valid.”

Officer Crompton also testified about another incident in which an employee at a downtown bar confronted Magaña, telling him to leave his wife or girlfriend alone. Magaña dismissed the incident as mistaken identity but later disappeared from his patrol with Crompton. Crompton said he found Magaña back at the bar where Magaña explained he complaint was unfounded on her recommendation.

But the woman called back the following day and spoke to a second supervisor, who handled the complaint much differently. That sergeant quickly brought it to the attention of his superiors and referred the case for criminal investigation.

McKee said he didn’t investigate why Flynn didn’t look in Magaña’s police notebook in her investigation. The accuser had said Magaña had written her name and phone number there. “That was the quick way to figure it out. That was going to be pivotal information.”

McKee said he also would not have left the serious complaint hanging while he took his days off. “I don’t necessarily agree that that is something that can wait two days.”

‘Womanizer’

Magaña had a reputation among many officers as a “womanizer.”

Officer Thompson said Magaña bragged about his exploits and abilities with women and told him he had been with “over 100” women in his life. Thompson said Magaña would frequently be checking out women, saying “look at her.” He said he went to strip clubs with Magaña.

It was widely known in the department that Magaña was cheating on his wife, officer Crompton testified.

Crompton, a close personal acquaintance of Magaña, said he was “a dog” when it came to women. Magaña seemed to know many women, including those of “questionable character,” he said. “I’ve never met a man who knew so many females by name.”

Officer McKee said he once saw Magaña make a woman uncomfortable with how he looked at her while Magaña was policing the Eugene Celebration. Magaña was “looking her up and down and kind of having a smirk on his face.”

As the investigation ballooned, McKee said he “was constantly amazed” at the scale of the abuse Magaña had perpetrated in Eugene. He said he’s continuing to investigate new allegations against Magaña with a total of “upwards of 40” victims.

With many of these women alleging dozens or even scores of incidents of forced sex, Magaña would have rep-

‘We’re supposed to have high moral character so that they can trust us to run around in the city.’
— officer Mel Thompson

had cleared the incident up. Crompton said he later ran into the accuser, who said it was a mistake.

Crompton did not report the accusation or the disappearance of Magaña, and McKee said he hadn’t heard any criticism of Crompton in the department for failing to do that.

Almost Undiscovered

The complaint that eventually broke the Magaña scandal open was originally quickly dismissed by a supervisor.

Lt. Kathryn Flynn fielded the complaint when it first came in. Flynn said the woman accused Magaña of “egregious” misconduct including fondling her breasts and buttocks and saying he wanted to bend her over and “do” her.

Flynn said she interviewed the woman and found her not credible because: Magaña denied he even knew her; she appeared more concerned about being arrested than the sex assault; Flynn didn’t see how they could have made out in a patrol car in a public area; Flynn mistakenly thought the woman was saying Magaña had returned to her apartment when Magaña was in fact at City Hall; and Flynn couldn’t corroborate her account with police records.

Flynn admitted that in hindsight she “should have” gone to the woman’s apartment to interview her and gather physical evidence such as a business card the woman said Magaña had given her.

Flynn said she closed her investigation within one and half hours of the complaint and left for three days off. She said she planed to send an email to IA when she got back about the complaint and expected that they would agree the resented his own crime wave. By comparison, in all of Eugene about 50 rapes and 220 sex offenses are reported each year.

McKee described one woman whose allegations emerged after the trial. The prostitute alleged she sold or was coerced into giving Magaña oral sex 50 times. Some of her story was backed up by EPD records, he said. “I thought he was capable of doing anything.”

McKee said he suspected Magaña was paying the prostitute with money he stole from street contacts or acquired from criminal activity. He said Magaña appeared to be living beyond his means and he referred the financial question to the U.S. attorney for an IRS investigation, but they haven’t pursued it.

Magaña wasn’t the first EPD officer to be accused of sexual misconduct. The lawsuit documents refer to a variety of incidents including sustained allegations against: a school officer who dated, sexually harassed and furnished alcohol to a woman under 21 whom he used as an informant; an officer who exposed himself to a female tailor; and a sergeant who had sex with his girlfriend while on duty.

Last year a joint report by the Police Executive Research Forum and International City Manager Association called on the city to hire an outside investigator to conduct a thorough internal investigation of failures in hiring Magaña and Lara and in handling complaints against them. But City Manager Dennis Taylor and Police Chief Robert Lehner have so far failed to do so. Without investigation, they continue to maintain that no one in the department besides Magaña and Lara did anything wrong. ■

WHAT'S happening

How often do you get to hear music from Zimbabwe? Beyond that, how often do you get to participate in workshops with Zimbabwean teachers, marimba jam sessions, non-stop dancing from 11 am to 11:30 pm or late-night parties with mbira playing around a fire pit? We thought it had been a while. This weekend is Zimfest's first visit to the Oregon Country Fair grounds. What, you're still blissed out on all of that OCF energy? Even if you're not, you can garner yet more good vibes from this glorious festival that brings together travelling Zimbabwean musicians with those who want to learn, dance and enjoy the late night music. And with more than 30 hours of concerts, the Zimfest is bound to please pretty much anyone. See Calendar.

OK, sit down, folks. Here's the deal: You cannot get a better deal this week than Tish Hinojosa at Luna Friday night. Waaaaaay back in 1979, Hinojosa won an award at Kerrville Folk Festival as a new artist, and she's simply been racking up the records, the awards and the devoted fans ever since. We don't know why her frequent recognition and stunning amount of social justice work haven't brought her fortune and more fame, but hey, that means we can go see her in an intimate setting for a song. We heart you, Tish! See Friday Calendar.

When we were just wee calendar editors, we lived in a large American city. And in that city, we did not see so many of the hog/cow/sheep types of animals despite the fact that the city was in the middle of the grain and beef belt. Still, we participated in 4-H. City 4-H went like this: Walk a few cement blocks in blistering heat and humidity to the community center, meet other sweaty kids from the neighborhood, go briefly inside to the air-conditioned joy that was the gym and then go back outside to love on tiny little potted plants. We remember it as being pretty cool when we were 6, but not as cool as, say, Fern & Wilbur in Charlotte's Web or Alonzo's pumpkin in Farmer Boy. Apparently, things are different here. The 4-H Youth Fair hits the Lane County Fairgrounds this week, and young adults from all over the place are even now bringing in their cattle, swine, horses and sheep, not to mention mini lop bunnies. That means Eugene's "urban" kids – even the ones who don't know a palomino from a primrose – will have a great time looking at the exhibits. See Calendar.

Perfection has its price.

Of course it tastes better than other beers. We've had over 600 years to get the recipe right. Our esteemed brewery has been producing beer in Leuven since 1366. Which means we've been around a bit longer than most. Mind you, over the years our beer has witnessed the odd change or two. For instance, our customers no longer drink it to ward off the Plague, as they used to in medieval times. However, one thing has stayed the same after all these years. Stella Artois is painstakingly brewed in a time-honoured tradition with the choicest ingredients. Which is why our customers have kept coming back for more, even after 600 years.

Always Enjoy Responsibly.

State of the Sole

A June 14 story in Willamette Week revealed that 95 percent of Portland's sushi restaurants receive at least part of their seafood from True World Foods, a national seafood distributor with ties to the Reverend Sun Myung Moon and his highly controversial Unification Church.

More commonly known as "The Moonies," Reverend Moon and his followers have been called a cult, with tendrils in the highest levels of corporate America. In the 52-year history of the church, Moon has been imprisoned for tax evasion and accused of brainwashing, personally profiting from the church and marrying hundreds of Japanese followers to Americans in mass weddings, making them American citizens and eligible for the labor force in service to the church.

In addition, Moon considers himself the messiah and, among other grandiose endeavors, has sought to unify the world under a single common language (Korean) and dominate the seafood industry. He has nearly succeeded in the latter.

Although Moon officially denies ties to True World Foods, CEO and founder Takeshi Yashiro is himself a Moonie and has admitted that a portion of True World's profits goes to the church.

The dominion of the self-proclaimed "King of the Ocean" extends to Eugene. Taro Kobayashi, who has been a sushi chef in Eugene for nearly eight years, claims that any restaurant in Eugene that serves sushi undoubtedly gets some of their supply from True World. An EW survey of the six local sushi restaurants revealed that five do business with True World. One could not be reached for comment. Currently a chef at Misako, Kobayashi has also worked at Shoji's and confirms that both restaurants patronize the company.

"They have pretty good stuff," says Kobayashi. "Their product is fair-priced and generally fresh. I usually like their seafood more than other companies we have used, but they don't have too much competition." Kobayashi's impression is that True World has cornered the sushi market in particular, catering primarily to Asian restaurants. He seemed surprised, however, at the connection with the infamous church. Although he doubts it will make a difference in the buying practices of the owners at Misako, Kobayashi now feels compelled to investigate the affiliation. "If David Koresh sold fish, would I buy fish from him? Probably not," he adds.

Not everyone is so put off by the connection, however. A manager of a local sushi restaurant who asked to remain unnamed sees no problem with the association between True World and the Moonies. "We don't have any problem. Actually they are kind of nice and the service is really good," he says. "We are happy to deal with them."

Grill, Steam, Marinate, Bake!

Congrats on joining a CSA! Yep, you are the proud owner of a share (or half or quarter share — after all, you have your own garden too) in a community supported agriculture venture. You attended the "That's My Farmer!" event at the First United Methodist Church last spring, and you're so dang pumped to get that first box of veggies and fruits (and maybe cheese, eggs and/or meat, depending on your CSA) that you can hardly stand it. You win the coin toss with your neighbors to get the box and race over to the pick-up site on your bike. You just can't wait any longer. As soon as you see the tub o' stuff you must open it.

Strawberries, check! Rhubarb, check! Lettuce and loose greens, check! But ... er ... what's this? This light green ... thing? Looks kind of like a turnip with alien sea creature fronds. Did something invade the farm?

Heck no, that's just kohlrabi. But no need to panic about it — or the beets, eggplant and kale that stymie other folks, says Jen Anonia, gardens program manager for FOOD for Lane County. Every week in the summer, she puts together a newsletter for those about to receive the Youth Farm CSA. She's heard all the freak-outs from friends and neighbors about cabbage, bok choy and other unfamiliar vegetables, so she's got quite a few recipes at her fingertips to soothe the racing brain.

Kale — that crumply-leaved, dark green, chock full o' vitamins member of the brassica family — might look intimidating, but Anonia says it's easy to steam kale and toss it with lemon juice, olive oil, salt, pepper and lightly sautéed garlic. Eggplant? Anonia doesn't say it, but the very best way to use eggplant might be baba ghanouj (we like the Casablanca recipe from the 7/21/05 Chow!, not that we're self-referential or anything).

Finally, alien veggie time. The kohlrabi root can be peeled and chopped for roasting, grilling, steaming or simply grating over salads; its leaves can be cooked just like kale, chard or mustard greens.

And then there's the beet chocolate cake ... — Suzi Steffen

Living the Vision

Three local places dream big.

STORY BY LANCE SPARKS • PHOTOS BY TODD COOPER

Open a restaurant: This is a dream I've had. There have been assorted Sparkses in restaurants for at least four generations. The restaurant dream lurks in the bloodline. One of my earliest, fondest memories is being dandled on Grandpa's knee, wagging chubby fingers in the cash register till of his diner somewhere near Charleston, S.C. Years later, manifest heritage: busboy, waiter, headwaiter, sommelier, manager, eventually part owner, working 14-hour days, seven days a week until Kat stamped her foot, said, "No more, all done." Wake up from reverie.

Even if some folks aren't deep-wired for The Biz, the dream is easy to catch. Begins with love of food, weakness for hospitality, yen for the sweet experience of eating well in a pretty place. The dream can even warp a business plan, goes like this: People always gotta eat, right? You serve 'em tasty food in a nice joint, at decent prices, they'll form a line out the door, right?

Right: Failure rate hovers around 50 percent. Happily, start-ups run at a slightly higher rate, and new dreamers wake inspired every day. We present three, a triple scoop of fine food dreams.

Park Street Café

Ambiance: cozy, tidy, warm and welcoming, high ceilings, old-brick walls, blond-wood tables (two outside), comfortable chairs, plants and fresh flowers, windows on to the street, tree-green streaming sunlight, the bustle of shoppers on Market days.

The new owners: two young women with deep restaurant pasts giving themselves a new present. Sheri Thieben and Fay Carter worked their ways through various venues, found themselves cooking together and liking it. Guy named Moe had owned Park Street Café for 12 years, sold out to Ruth, an employee, but she split town. Thieben and Carter signed in, remodeled, re-opened. "We have a beautiful vision," says Thieben. "We're living our vision," Carter adds.

Righteous food: Breakfasts and lunches with flavor from the "highest quality, local, sustainable ingredients" at honest prices: eggs and toast at $4.95; oatmeal with cinnamon, sunflower seeds, dates, raisins, choice of soy-, rice-, or cow's-milk or yogurt at $3.95; salmon burger $7.50; tempeh Reuben, $6.75; arrays of salads; basic black beans and rice $3.75.

Huevos rancheros delish at $6.50; helps to shop for fresh seasonal fruit and veggies 50 feet from the door.

Sweet little joint, tucked away. Hope they make it. Should have beer and wine by July. Right now: "We're getting by," Thieben says. Quirky hours, just for fun: 7:44 am-2:46 pm Monday-Friday, 9:29 am-3:29 pm Saturday, closed Sunday.

776 W. Park, in the historic Smeed Building. 485-2089.

Jo Federigo's

Rick Kluser and Searose Hood bought the venerable Jo Fed's in February of this year, spiffed the place up and developed an ambitious Italian menu, a mix of the traditional (pizzas and calzone; pastas such as spaghetti, ravioli, lasagna, cannelloni, fettuccine four ways; entrées from chicken piccata at $16 to spiced sesame ahi at $19 to tenderloin at $26), with prices more than fair in the current market. The wine list is modest in length (16 white, 22 reds), strong in Italians and Northwest wines, good prices; nine micros on tap, including Stella Artois, all $4/pint.

Hood and Kluser retained the best of the old Jo: Full bar and generous drinks; the most experienced servers, including Blake Livingston, a consummate pro; and, of course, the music. Jo's has for decades been Eugene's top venue for the area's top jazz musicians, some of whom developed a dedicated fan base; pianist Barbara Dzuro, for example, could always fill the place with her following.

The space really is — always has been — attractive and lively, the front room with tables dressed in white clothes, a wall of south-facing windows looking across to Fifth Street Market, the light creamy in summer sunsets, some OK art on the walls. The back dining room still wears its distinctive umbrellas on the ceiling. The downstairs bar is cleaner now but still huddles jazz lovers close to the music (starts at 9 pm).

The food is good, even if Hood and Kluser are struggling with start-up blues, trying to retain a talented kitchen staff and give an established house a new identity. So easy to see this image: Good Italian food, fine American music. Who could resist?

259 E. 5th Ave. 343-8488.

Rick Kluser, Jo Federigo's

Our Daily Bread

Tim and Catherine Perkins bought Our Daily Bread in February of this year, and they might be positioned to become a special success story. Just a short shot down Territorial from some of this region's best wineries — ten minutes south to Hinman/Silvan Ridge, Sweet Cheeks, Iris Hill, King Estate, Chateau Lorane; five minutes to Secret House, less to LaVelle — this could become Lane wine country's first full-service, fine-dining house, just at the right time. Last year, King Estate drew ten thousand visitors, with more expected this year. ODB might become a precursor, the sort of fine restaurant in small-town atmosphere we could find today in Napa Valley villages like Calistoga and St. Helena.

The building began its life as a Pentecostal church, was moved to Veneta, bought, remodeled (adding a steeple, lovely wood floors, gothic-arch windows with stained glass, a banquet room) and operated by Rick Di Angelo for ten years as a bakery and lunch spot. The Perkins family (daughter Tabitha also involved) remodeled and cleaned, dressed up the outside dining area, livened up grounds and garden. ODB now offers a super dinner menu (also serving breakfast and lunch six days, closed Mondays) at grand-theft prices: seven appetizers, including Alsea crab cakes, $7.95; wide range of entrées, seafood (e.g., tempura prawns, $12.95, smoked salmon pappardelle, $14.95), beef (Featherbenders prime rib, $16.95, or $19.95 with prawns), poultry (Featherbenders smoked duck, $24.95), four vegetarian dishes, soups, salads, desserts.

Wine list is brief but entirely dedicated to area vintners, including some rare finds, all priced for retail or in-house (about $3 more, for glassware and service, reasonable). Plans call for a retail wine space soon; free wine tastings, featuring the local bests, take place on Saturdays noon-5 pm).

Our Daily Bread feels comfortable, the place is intriguing, and the food is good. With proper support, this could become a destination. Given its unique structure, this might be a dream with a prayer.

Closing Arguments

Cabana Blue shuts its doors, for now.

BY MELISSA BEARNS

The sign announcing the June 9 grand opening of Cabana Blue, a restaurant at 174 W. Broadway, is still hanging on the outside of the building above the door. But inside, the room is empty, and in the window hangs another sign denouncing the city of Eugene for forcing the closing of "another minority owned business."

On a Wednesday afternoon in mid-July owner Lisa Sanchez was finishing the cleanup and move-out, the last steps in closing the business just a month after it officially opened. Sanchez says that when she opened up the business she went to the city, county, OLCC and others and got all the necessary permits. According to Sanchez, a few weeks after she opened, the city came down and told her she needed various permits and upgrades in order to continue to operate. The grand total to keep her doors open, Sanchez says, would be about $7,000.

Steve McGuire, the city's plan review supervisor for the city's Building and Permit Services, says the city is just trying to enforce the building code and make sure the space is safe for the public. According to McGuire, before Sanchez moved in, the location was used as office space by Symantec Corp.

"The building code is in place to ensure that a building is safe based on the way it's being used," he says. For example, when the space was an office, it might have had a maximum of 20 or so people in it at one time. But for a restaurant, McGuire says, they assume a higher occupancy rate. So the building code is set up to make sure a building can handle the estimated maximum number of people based on the use.

He says he's gone over to Cabana Blue to talk to Sanchez and try to help her bring her space into compliance with the city building code. When asked about the signs in the window, he responded, "She absolutely has a right to put them up. But it may exemplify her awareness or lack of awareness of what the codes are and why they exist. Because we're not trying to put any business out of business. We're trying to make sure buildings are safe for the public."

Sanchez says regardless of the reasons for the additional fees, it's not worth it for her to stay in the location and try to bring her restaurant into compliance with the building codes. Instead, she's planning to move into a new space that's already approved for restaurant use. ★

Cook, Shoot, Type, Experiment

Food bloggers share their passion. STORY BY MOLLY TEMPLETON • PHOTOS BY TODD COOPER

Like most places these days, Eugene has its fair share of blogs. One blog-tracking site lists 76 Eugene blogs; LiveJournal shows 46; real-time blog search engine Technorati, 27. Of course, this doesn't track every blog in town. Eugene is rich in music and personal blogs, but as this is a food section, we're interested in one thing: food bloggers. There's a small handful of local folks who blog about food and cooking; two in particular are consistently food-centric, informative and definitely entertaining.

They're also both scientists.

Jocelyn McAuley, 31, got her bachelor's degree in biology at the UO, has spent the last 10 years in Eugene and currently works at the UO's Westerfield Lab. She posts (as "McAuliflower") two or three times a week at Brownie Points (www.browniepointsblog.com), writing about topics from making your own marshmallows (see recipe, page 17) to a Harry Potter-inspired breakfast recipe to her Fourth of July post. That post described painting flags on tuna sandwiches using food coloring. "First Amendment variation," reads the bottom of the post, "Decorate your all American white bread with the flag and toast before slathering on the tuna. Even better is to whip out your blowtorch and burn the edges ... because you can."

McAuley began her blog in November 2004 after coming across a personal food blog while researching how to use ground-up dried pomegranate seeds. "It wasn't a company, and it was a person's voice. It was really interesting, because it was their journal of all the recipes they had been doing. My first thought was, 'I should have been doing this already! How do I start?'" Her first food-centric entry (after a brief introductory post) was about her disappointment with East 19th St. Café's fries, which she called "an unfortunate failed fryer incident that is being perpetuated in the name of 'a signature style.'"

McAuley says her blog "came out of realizing I had a cooking style of trying to find the ultimate version of a recipe." These days, she doesn't have time to make the same recipe over and over for two months, but the blog is still "a great way to not lose your notes from the kitchen." And, perhaps, to let other people benefit from those notes: Brownie Points gets about 2,000 visitors each day.

Michelle Phillips, 29, is a Ph.D. candidate in biology at the UO. Her blog, The Accidental Scientist (accidentalscientist.blogspot.com), began last September. She'd been admiring the food photography on blogs like Delicious Days (www.deliciousdays.com) and getting into cooking after a few grad school years when, she says, "I didn't eat anything unless it came from a box and I could microwave it." The gorgeous pictures online made Phillips think food blogging could be fun. Beautiful fresh grapes brought in by a coworker inspired her first post, complete with pictures.

Phillips' posts often blend recipes with anecdotes from her life, all written in a jaunty, playful style. Earlier this month, she wrote a sweet, clever post in the form of a recipe that was actually about her recent engagement. "Take female and male rock climbers and mix together in 1 beautiful state park over high heat," the "instructions" section began. As for her interest in food photography, "I've been known to save the leftovers and make them all pretty on the

Get Yer Food Blogs Here

If there's one thing true about most bloggers, it's that they like to read other blogs.

Here are a few of Michelle and Jocelyn's food-focused favorites from across the blogosphere, with their explanations why.

MICHELLE PHILLIPS:

"Oh, that's tough!" Phillips wrote when asked for just three favorites. Her picks:

Lucillian Delights (lucillian.blogspot.com): For both her original recipes, great photography, and because she's become such a close friend.

Kuidaore (brandoesq.blogspot.com): For her exquisite photos and her wonderfully rich writing.

I'm Mad and I Eat (madeater.blogspot.com): For her great food commentary and liberal slant on politics.

JOCELYN MCAULEY:

Nordljus (www.nordljus.co.uk/en): This site houses a stunning collection of pastry fantasies that occupy my wish list. Keiko, the site's author, dares to seek out those amazingly structured, layered, convoluted desserts that one would imagine finding in a pâtisserie in Paris, and then shares the beautiful results with us. Her site is ruled by the concept of amazing food looking just as good as it tastes.

101 Cookbooks (www.101cookbooks.com): Heidi resides in the Bay area, and perfectly sums up the concept of her food blog: "The premise this site was built on is best summed up in two sentences: When you own more than 100 cookbooks, it is time to stop buying, and start cooking. This site chronicles a cookbook collection, one recipe at a time." She brings the fresh perspective of seasonal cooking combined with cute ideas (like making homemade Girl Scout Cookies!) that I always wish I had thought of.

Eggbeater (eggbeater.typepad.com/shuna): Shuna brings a wonderful perspective to her posts about food. Having worked as a pastry chef in some of America's highest rated restaurants (Chez Panisse, French Laundry, Citizen Cake), she manages to let these gems of insight sneak out that really resonate with me. My latest favorite posting is her musing on butterscotch (eggbeater.typepad.com/shuna/2006/06/butterscotch.html), a flavor that seems to have been lost from the hands of our cooks and taken over by processing plants.

plate the next morning so I can take a picture," she says. "The light in my kitchen is terrible!"

Phillips and McAuley agree that their science background is connected to their interest in food and cooking. McAuley, who recently wrote about making ice cream with liquid nitrogen, says, "I'd say there's definitely a link ... especially if you look at doing experiments, and knowing how to keep controls if you have a recipe that's not working, and not change every single variable in it all at once and then wonder why your cookies still didn't turn out."

For Phillips, learning the technical side of blogging was the most difficult. "I'm a terrible blogger!" she says, laughing. "It took me a long time to figure out the HTML." Computer savvy aside, blogs can cause some confusion among friends and family. "A lot of family members, they say, 'You have a what? What's a blog?' Well, it's just a website. Go check it out! Go read it!" Phillips says.

But blogs are more than that. Blogs become part of a social network that reaches across the world. Programs like Blogger and LiveJournal have built-in systems for readers' comments, encouraging a dialogue that sometimes extends off the blog into e-mail or in-person friendships. "There are different ways to have little food blog neighborhoods," McAuley says.

"It's a real international community." Phillips has readers from around the world, many of whom have been following her blog since the beginning. "You really start to make friends in your blog," she says. "There are people that I talk to every day who live in Italy."

These days, blogs have clear potential for morphing into something else — bloggers Julie Powell, Belle du Jour and Ana Marie Cox (aka Wonkette) are among those who have turned their online writing into book deals. But neither Phillips nor McAuley is sitting around waiting for a publisher to call. "The book idea? You'll make money somehow and be famous and somebody will offer you a cookbook deal? I entertain that [idea], but I think it's a lot of work," McAuley says. Phillips says she's thought about the possibilities as well, especially since she started blogging at a time when she was struggling with grad school. "At the same time," she says, "it terrifies me because I don't want to try to make it into a career and end up tired of it or hating cooking."

For now, hating cooking doesn't seem to be a looming problem for either blogger. As Phillips wrote in June, "Over the last year, comfort has become getting into my kitchen, banging some pans around, and making something to eat."

And then, of course, writing about it. ★

In Praise of Breakfast

Sustenance and substance of the morning meal.

BY VANESSA SALVIA

In James Michener's Iberia, a book of reflections on the author's Spanish travels, he wrote that the Spanish bargemen enjoyed anchovies, "hard bread, harder cheese, and red wine" as their morning meal. Our own custom of fried eggs, bacon, coffee and orange juice served alongside yesterday's tragedies displayed in the newspaper sounds much less civilized than the bargemen's honest offerings to the young writer.

Ernest Hemingway displayed his great love of food in both his stout physique and in his writings. In one of his short stories, "Big Two-Hearted River: Part I," he describes an unpleasant-sounding concoction that was probably the best breakfast his protagonist had ever eaten:

Nick ... did not believe he had ever been hungrier. He opened and emptied a can of pork and beans and a can of spaghetti into the frying pan. ... While he waited for the coffee to boil, he opened a can of apricots. He liked to open cans. ... While he watched the coffee on the fire, he drank the juice syrup of the apricots.

Most of us aren't having pork and beans and canned apricots for breakfast, but this passage does display two important requirements of a successful breakfast: that some part of it be warm and some part of it be sweet.

Breakfast. The word comes from the fast you break after sleeping all night and conjures up something solemn and ritualistic. Typically, Americans prefer sweet stuff for breakfast, and we want what we're used to, with few or no variations. Eggs must be cooked a certain way or the rest of the day is destined to be a disappointment.

Elizabethan households may have enjoyed morning meals like the ones we're used to, consisting of eggs, bread and butter, even pancakes topped with sweet syrupy fruit, marmalades and powdered sugar. Hot coffee with sugar, cold cereal with sugar, frosted doughnut, French toast with powdered sugar, or pancakes with butter and maple syrup get most modern motors running in the morning. No other meal lends itself so completely to the consumption of sugar and fat.

Maybe it's adaptive, an evolutionary holdover from when we woke up on the floor of the cave on frigid ice age mornings and needed energy quickly. A carrot stick, no matter how healthy, is just not satisfying after an eight-hour fast. While we often drink a reviving glass of cold orange juice, minds still require something warm to ease the transition from bed to outside world. The simplest of breakfasts, toast with butter, is a slice of bread warmed up a little to seem more nourishing.

Even if some people have nothing but coffee and cigarettes on weekdays, on leisurely weekend mornings we yearn for something more substantial. The comforting sizzle of frying bacon, warm creaminess of eggs scrambled with butter and the rejuvenating smell of brewing coffee puts all right with the world.

Americans love breakfast so much that we have also perfected brunch. Most brunch foods are more elaborate breakfast foods that allow us to extend our enjoyment of all things egg (omelettes, frittatas, scrambles, crepes) served with all things sweet (muffins, scones, jams, fruits, syrups) and salty (sausages, bacon, ham, smoked salmon). Plus, brunch gives us tacit approval to indulge in alcohol before noon – if it's combined with fruit juice, as in a mimosa or a bloody Mary.

W. K. Kellogg was definitely a pioneer when it came to mass-producing and mass-marketing cold breakfast cereal, but oh, how lucky we are that today we have so many choices! ★

Hungry Now? Try These!

Studio One,
1473 E. 19th Ave. 342-8596

If you're not totally committed to a sweet breakfast, don't even think about Studio One's French toast: three slices of challah bread thicker than your thumb, stuffed with a light house-made almond custard and topped with a syrupy berry compote, dusted with powdered sugar. It hits all the right morning food spots: sweet, fruity, warm, soft and comforting. However, don't attempt a Studio One breakfast if you're short on time. It's a small place and quite popular, and eating there on a weekend often involves a substantial wait. The service can be spotty, and coffee refills aren't always forthcoming, so go with patience and maybe your own espresso. One you're seated and served, it's worth the wait.

Keystone Café,
395 W. 5th Ave. 342-2075.

Again, don't attempt eating here if you're in a hurry. It's often crowded and noisy and you have to get your own coffee and water, making it a less than relaxing experience, but no other restaurant offers such a diverse breakfast menu. There are plenty of options for omnivores and strict vegans, such as myriad egg scrambles and tofu or tempeh options with nutritional yeast (delicious!) or tomato gravy. The house-made herb toast can't be beat, and portion sizes are filling but not overly so. Sometimes the coffee tastes like dishwater, but if breakfast is what you want, you will definitely leave satisfied.

Eau de Vie

Wine & food stores on the coast fulfill gourmet needs. BY SUZI STEFFEN

Wary oenophile Willamette Valley residents headed to the Oregon Coast often pack several bottles of wine, stashing them alongside wetsuits, hiking boots and tents and that blue Bill Sullivan book. But the coast is no blasted domain where visitors can only find tiny bottles of cheap wine in fluorescent-lit convenience store refrigerators. Instead, a variety of options make the coast a wine destination.

In the late spring of 2004, Carrie Yano opened a gourmet food store in an old art co-op building. Yano, originally from Monterey, Calif., visited Yachats in 2003. She was about to begin Lutheran seminary school in Berkeley. "I never went back," she says. "Yachats was perfect." Yano thought that the only thing missing — as coastal travelers who have gone in search of certain ingredients might know — was a place to buy "prosciutto, good feta cheese, good olive oil, minced ginger." In the summer, Yano didn't mind driving to Eugene or Newport for higher-end food ingredients, but in the winter? "I was driving in 40-50 mile an hour winds, and I thought, I can't handle this. We need a store in Yachats."

So Yano opened Gourmet Lady, with foods ranging from Swedish ginger cookies to specialty cheese and smoked salmon. She decided to have one rack of wine, with room for 80 bottles of Oregon wine.

Those 80 bottles didn't last long. With hordes of townspeople and tourists descending upon the wine rack, Yano's next decision was easy even if she wasn't fully prepared.

"All I knew was that they grow good pinot here — that was the extent of my Oregon wine knowledge," she says. With the advice of an Oregon wine rep who lives in Yachats, she learned enough to move her wine rack across the deck into her new store, The Wine Place (Hwy 101 & Fourth). Now, Yano carries about 800 bottles of 350 different wines, and she's expanding The Wine Place so that there will be more room for wine and local winery tastings. Those tastings, events in which visitors pepper the winemakers with questions and happily sip a variety of wines, come at 1 pm each Saturday.

The original rack now holds "Carrie's recommendations," which currently include Medittrina, a pinot noir/syrah/zinfandel blend from Sokol Blosser in Dundee; a "rising star" pinot noir from Piluso, a small winery in Marion County; and Cramer's pinot noirs. "A really fun one," she says, "is the Red Hawk Winery Grateful Red pinot noir." At $12 a bottle, the wine flies off the rack.

But Yano's business isn't alone in bringing vino-culture to the coast or even to Yachats. A couple of months ago, managers Marsii and Harley Charron opened The Yachats Wine Trader (125 Ocean View Drive), a wine bar and café with a strong selection of European and South American wines in the bottle room. For food, Marsii recommends Harley's prosciutto-wrapped peaches. South American whites like Lo Tengo Torrentés are selling well this summer, she says, and she recommends trying rosés as well. "They're really exciting, complex wines," she says.

A little closer to Eugene, Florence's The Grape Leaf (1269 Bay St.) serves dinner on Wednesday and Thursday nights amidst a large selection of wine. And farther up the coast, Newport's Village Market & Deli (741 NW Third) provides gourmet cheeses and other gourmet food while the highly popular Blu Cork Wine Bar (613 SW Third) is open from noon to midnight for the summer and has recently expanded its tapas menu to include wood-fired pizzas.

For those who worry about driving after imbibing, there's more decadence available: Coastal Luxury Limo tours (www.coastalluxurylimos.com) stops at the Wine Place and local vineyards. Now that sounds like bliss. ★

CATFISH SANDWICH WITH HABAÑERO MAYONNAISE FROM HORSEHEAD BAR

The Horsehead's Chef Jevon is a third generation Cajun chef. If you love Southern-style soul food, check the place out for lunch or dinner. Here's Jevon's down-home catfish creation, prepared intuitively, not precisely.

Chop fresh habañeros and mix with mayo – 2 peppers per cup of mayo, thereabouts.

Prepare two small catfish filets. Milk dip yer catfish, roll in flour dip then roll in corn meal. Season flour with salt and pepper or whatever yer little ol' heart desires.

Deep fry or pan sear 'til done. If the catfish is oily it needs more cook time.

On a kaiser bun fix a sandwich with lettuce, tomato and red onion.

Affix yer mayo to yer likin' on the bun. Some like it hot, some do not.

Slaw and fries go great on the side.

Horsehead serves this as a special, but can make it anytime.

Reservations for 8+. Separate smoking room. Take-out. Some OG. Wheelchair accessible. 11:30 am-10:30 pm M-Th, 11:30 am-11 pm F, 4-11 pm Sa, noon-10:30 pm Su. MC/V/AE. $-$. $.

LENTIL ENCHILADAS WITH ROASTED CORN AND TOMATO SALSA

FROM MICHELLE PHILLIPS,
accidentalscientist.blogspot.com
Serves 4

ENCHILADAS:

1/2 cup lentils
1 cup chicken stock
1/3 cup red onion, finely diced
2 tbsp. red wine vinegar
1/2 tsp. cumin
salt and pepper, to taste
4 flour tortillas (soft taco size)
1/2 cup sharp cheddar cheese, grated
1 lime, cut into wedges, for garnish

SALSA:

1 ear of fresh corn, husked
1 tsp. olive oil
1 1/2 cup chopped tomatoes
2 tbsp. cilantro, chopped, plus more for garnish
1/2 tsp. garlic salt
1 tsp. fresh lime juice

1 chopped jalapeno, seeded if you want a milder salsa
pepper to taste

Combine lentils and chicken stock in a medium saucepan and cook over medium-high heat until liquid is absorbed (about 30 minutes).

Preheat oven to 350° F. While lentils are cooking, make salsa. For salsa, rub olive oil over the ear of corn, season with salt and pepper, and grill the corn over medium heat on a grill or grill pan (a second option is to cut the kernels off the cob and cook in a single layer on a baking sheet in the preheated oven, stirring occasionally, until browned). Let cool slightly, cut the kernels off of the cob and then combine with remaining salsa ingredients.

Once liquid is absorbed and lentils are tender, add red onion, red wine vinegar, cumin and salt and pepper (to taste).

Oil a baking dish with cooking spray or olive oil. Microwave tortillas, wrapped in paper towels, for 15-30 seconds or until warmed (this can also be done in the oven, wrapped in foil). Fill warmed tortillas with 1/2 cup of lentil mixture. Sprinkle with cheese and bake 10 minutes or until cheese melts. Serve with salsa, garnished with sprigs of fresh cilantro and lime wedges.

SPICY HOT CINNAMON MARSHMALLOWS

FROM JOCELYN MCAULEY, www.browniepointsblog.com

This project is an easy vote for the beautiful tasty alchemy of melted sugar. Making homemade marshmallows is very do-able and a bit addictive! Sugary hot cinnamon marshmallows make for a great s'mores flavor remix to bring your friends to their knees. These can be used anywhere marshmallows are demanded: on top of hot chocolate, hot apple cider, and in Rice Krispie treats.

Equipment needed for making the sugar beasties:

- stand mixer
- candy thermometer
- marshmallow resting container (7" x 11" baking pan yields marshmallows that are 3/4" tall. An 8" x 8" baking pan will yield taller marshmallows.)
- silicone coated parchment paper or waxed paper (marshmallows are supremely sticky before dusting!)

Ingredients:

2 packets plain unflavored gelatin water
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 cup plus 3 tbsp. tiny red hot cinnamon candies
approx. 1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup plus 2 tbsp. corn syrup
rice flour or potato starch (for dusting)

Line your chosen baking pan with parchment paper or waxed paper. Cutting a slit up the corners of the paper on the diagonal helps it fit better in a rectangular container. Lightly oil the paper and set aside.

In a stand mixer bowl, outfitted with a wire whisk, pour 1/4 cup plus 2 tbsp. water.

Sprinkle the gelatin over to soften.

Grind up 1/2 cup of tiny red hot cinnamon candies in a clean coffee grinder till the candies are pulverized to a dust. Add enough granulated sugar to the ground up candies so that the total volume equals 1 1/2 cups.

Put this cinnamon candy sugar, corn syrup, salt and 1/4 cup plus 2 tbsp. water in a heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook until it reaches the soft-ball stage (234-240 °F). It's important to not go beyond this temperature range. Doing so will compromise the texture of your marshmallows.

With the mixer at low speed, pour all of the hot syrup slowly down the side of the bowl. Be careful as the mixture is very liquid and hot at this point and some may splash out of the bowl – use a splash guard if you have one. After one minute of mixing on low, increase the mixer speed to high and continue for 8 minutes, until the mixture is very fluffy and stiff. Pour the mixture into your prepped marshmallow resting container. Allow the mixture to sit, uncovered at room temperature, for 10 to 12 hours. Do not refrigerate, as the refrigerator's moisture will affect the mixture's ability to set up properly.

After resting, the marshmallows will be set though rather sticky. All cut surfaces will benefit from a dusting of sugar-flour coating: grind up about 3 tbsp. red hot cinnamon candies to a fine powder and combine with an equal volume of rice flour or potato starch. Dust this mixture over the top surface of your set marshmallow slab.

Turn the marshmallow slab out onto a cutting board or counter, peel off the oiled paper and dust the revealed surface with more sugar/starch mixture. Slice with a thin-bladed oiled knife, oiled cookie or a pizza cutter. Dip all cut edges in the sugar/starch mixture and shake off the excess. Your homemade marshmallows will keep several weeks at room temp in an air-tight container. Enjoy!

A Sublime Puzzle

Looking for meaning in the crossword community.

WORDPLAY: Directed by Patrick Creadon. Written by Patrick Creadon and Christine O'Malley. Cinematography, Patrick Creadon. Music, Vic Fleming and Peter Golub. Featuring Ken Burns, Bill Clinton, Neal Conan, Bob Dole, Liane Hansen, Mike Mussina, Amy Ray, Emily Saliers and Jon Stewart. IFC Films, 2006. PG. 94 minutes.

Part of the pleasure of the new film Wordplay is how it manages to make something as trivial as crossword puzzles seem profoundly important to our lives and our culture. Along the way, Wordplay doesn't condescend or proselytize. It doesn't try to convince you that crosswords will save your life, your marriage or your bank account. Instead, Wordplay does what all great documentaries do: It connects us to people or things we've overlooked and in the process shows us who we are. In the sense that it examines a fanatical, grammatical subculture, Wordplay is not unlike a Spellbound (2003) for adults. It's a small masterpiece.

Although billed as a Will Shortz tribute film, Wordplay actually is much more than that. Shortz, the "Errol Flynn of crossword puzzling," is the current puzzle editor at The New York Times and the creator of the American Crossword Puzzle Tournament. A godlike figure to puzzlers the world over, Shortz is the natural centerpiece here. But Wordplay is about the various personalities who have gravitated to, triumphed over and been defeated by the puzzles Will Shortz helped create.

One of the many achievements of Wordplay is how it manages to balance so many stories at once. It's so ingeniously constructed that no summary can do it justice. Bookending the film is the 2005 Tournament hosted by Shortz in Stamford, Conn. Predictably, we meet the best players from prior tournaments, setting us up for a finale involving people we know. The puzzlers range from an intensely competitive college student to a deeply introspective studio piano player whose definition of art borders on the sublime. They are misfits all, and you expect that in a film about championship crossword puzzling. But these are the proudest misfits you'll ever meet.

Some of the most effective scenes in the movie don't involve the competitors at all. Wordplay moderates the geek factor to great effect by interviewing prominent American crossword devotees. Among them are the Yankees' Mike Mussina, folk-rock act the Indigo Girls, former President Bill Clinton, former Senator Bob Dole, filmmaker Ken Burns and comedian Jon Stewart. Stewart, whom you know (or should know) from television's "The Daily Show," is in full mock-attack mode here, repeatedly challenging Shortz to a fight over the difficulty of his puzzles. It's a brilliant act. Only Stewart could turn crosswords into a life or death event.

As if this weren't enough to make Wordplay exceptionally entertaining, the movie documents the creation of a single puzzle from master puzzle constructor Merl Reagle. To Reagle, puzzle creation is as simple as reciting the alphabet. If he didn't look like Bigfoot, he might be a crossover celebrity. Later, in a brilliant example of how tightly fitted together Wordplay's parts are, the celebrities are given Merl's puzzle, which they attempt to solve with uneven results. You've never seen your heroes more real than while they're struggling with the Sunday crossword. It's fantastic.

In the end, Wordplay isn't about crossword puzzles at all. It's about how far people will go to solve problems and how competition brings out our best and worst natures. What is intelligence? What does it mean to be human? These are the questions at the heart of this film. Easily one of the strongest movies of the year, Wordplay deserves the widest audience possible. It's a subtle and inspiring work. It boasts top-class production and visual effects — yes, it even has cool special effects — but its charms are predominantly human in nature. Never is this more obvious than when Ellen, a self-proclaimed nerd and Tournament champion, answers her boyfriend's teasing with this proud retort: What are you best in the country at?" EW

Wordplay opens Friday, July 21 at the Bijou.

Chowder and DJ check out their adversary.

Hungry Home

There goes the neighborhood.

MONSTER HOUSE: Directed by Gil Kenan. Screenplay by Dan Harmon, Rob Schrab and Pamela Pettler. Executive producers, Steven Spielberg and Robert Zemeckis. With the voices of Mitchel Musso, Sam Lerner, Spencer Locke, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Jon Heder, Steve Buscemi, Jason Lee and Kathleen Turner. Columbia Pictures, 2006. PG. 91 minutes.

It's hard not to wonder who decided Monster House should be a summer movie. It begins the day before Halloween, with a deliciously crisp shot that follows a single leaf's descent onto the clipped lawn of a ramshackle house. Created with motion capture, a combination of live action and computer animation, the movie is bright but shadowed, rich with the colors of fall and ripe with the haunting notions kids get about the creepy house down the street. But here we are in the middle of summer, and seasonal incongruity isn't Monster House's only weakness.

Twelve-year-old DJ (Mitchel Musso), whose head of snap-on Lego hair seems to weigh down his spindly body, has a feeling about the run-down house across the street. Neighborhood crankpot Mr. Nebbercracker (Steve Buscemi), all spidery limbs and bulbous nose, is notorious for chasing kids off his lawn, but DJ's noticed creepier things happening. Just before DJ's parents conveniently leave for the night, Nebbercracker has a nasty fall and is taken to the hospital. DJ's babysitter Zee (Maggie Gyllenhaal, always a lively presence) is distracted by her doofy boyfriend, Bones (Jason Lee). The time is ripe for exploring.

Alas, if only the house had much of an interior to explore. After a series of false starts, DJ, his friend Chowder (Sam Lerner) and smart-cookie candy saleswoman Jenny (Spencer Locke), whom the house had intended to have as an afternoon snack, make their way inside. For a few tense moments, Monster House seems as if it might pick up the pace after its leisurely first half. It does, slightly, but the excitement feels hollow, like the amusement park ride the film has already been compared to. You go in, you ooh and aah briefly at the effects, which are at times spooky and inspired, and you know, the whole time, that everyone on the ride will come out the other side just fine. It's a strange line for a film with tween characters to walk — very scary at points (possibly too much so for small kids), but unwilling to put anything real at stake in a way that would make the adventure more meaningful.

Director Gil Kenan takes a keen interest in the monstrous house's effective, evil anthropomorphism: Windows stand in for eyes, broken slats of wood for teeth, a long carpet for a tongue and Kathleen Turner for its personality. Turner, like the rest of the cast, even those in minor roles, is stellar. Steve Buscemi is not-perfect as crotchety old man Nebbercracker; as Zee's stoner boyfriend, Jason Lee speaks with a gleeful tinge of old-school Keanu Reeves; Jon Heder (Napoleon Dynamite) gets a giggle as the local videogame champion (at a game called Thou Art Dead) and keeper of obscure paranormal knowledge. Each character has a moment or two where he or she elevates Monster House above the average moderately charming animated feature, but, like the leaf settling on the house's lawn, it doesn't stay afloat too long. EW

Monster House opens Friday, July 21 at Cinemark & Cinema World.

OPENING OR RETURNING:

Clerks II: Eminently quotable writer-director Kevin Smith returns to the mini-mart clerks with which his career began. Randal (Jeff Anderson) and Dante (Brian O'Halloran) face fast food jobs, grown-up matters and, of course, endless geek-centric debates. R. Cinema World. Cinemark.

Garfield: A Tail of Two Kitties: Bill Murray returns as the voice of the once-somewhat-classic Garfield, who follows his owner Jon (Breckin Meyer) to London. Some kind of mad cat switcheroo ensues with a high-falutin' royal feline named Prince. PG. Movies 12.

Idiot, The: Reading and film series focusing on Fyodor Dostoevsky's The Idiot and Vladimir Bortko's adaptation of the text. Seventh reading and episode July 20; eighth reading and episode July 25; ninth reading and episode July 27: 7 pm film, 8 pm discussion each night. 142 Law, UO.

Lady in the Water: Paul Giamatti (Sideways) plays a building superintendent who finds, in the building's pool, a creature called a "narf" (seriously) who needs to get back to her world. Supposedly, the first film from writer-director M. Night Shyamalan (The Sixth Sense) to not hinge on a plot twist. PG-13. Cinema World. Cinemark.

Monster House: Three kids face off against a creepy neighborhood house that's something other than haunted. With the voices of Maggie Gyllenhaal, Steve Buscemi and Jon Heder. PG. Cinema World. Cinemark. See review this issue.

My Super Ex-Girlfriend: Matt (Luke Wilson) breaks up with his needy girlfriend Jenny (Uma Thurman) only to find she's got superpowers. And she's going to use them against him. Because women are crrrrrazy! PG-13. Cinema World. Cinemark.

Sinbad: Legend of the Seven Seas: Animated pirate adventure tale stars the voice of Brad Pitt as Sinbad, Catherine Zeta-Jones as Marina and Michelle Pfeiffer as the goddess of chaos. Joe Fiennes plays Proteus, a rival pirate. PG. Plays only at 10 am July 25 at Movies 12.

Thank You for Smoking: Jason Reitman (the son of director Ivan Reitman) directs Aaron Eckhart and a strong supporting cast in this sharp-eyed, satirical look at the tobacco industry. R. Movies 12. Online archives.

Union Man, A: The Life and Work of Julius Margolin: The story of New York City labor activist Julius Margolin, active since the 1930s. Since 1999, Margolin has been making music as well as organizing workers. Plays at DIVA at 7:30 pm July 21 with concert and Q & A. $5-$10 sug. don.

Wordplay: Bill Clinton, Jon Stewart and Yankees pitcher Mike Mussina are among those proclaiming their love for the New York Times crossword puzzle in this winning doc, which focuses on puzzle master Will Shortz and the competitors in an annual crossword tournament. Likely one of the best films of the year. PG. Bijou. See review this issue.

Films open the Friday following EW publication date unless otherwise noted. See archived reviews at www.eugeneweekly.com

CONTINUING:

Break-Up, The: Jennifer Aniston and Vince Vaughn star in the latest from director Peyton Reed (Bring It On) as a Chicago pair who apparently aren't very good at breaking up. PG-13. Movies 12. Online archives.

Cars: The animation wizards at Pixar (Toy Story, Finding Nemo) team up with Disney for the story of a rookie race car (voiced by Owen Wilson) taking an unexpected detour on his way to a big race. Bonnie Hunt and Paul Newman also voice characters. G. Cinemark. Cinema World. Online archives.

Click: Christopher Walken gives Adam Sandler a truly universal remote: it lets him put the wife on fast forward, put the boss on pause, help the kid get even ... until the remote goes all TiVo on him and starts making decisions on its own. PG-13. Cinemark.

Devil Wears Prada, The: Meryl Streep stars as demanding, high-powered fashion magazine editor Miranda Priestley, whose new assistant (Anne Hathaway) is fresh from college and totally clueless about fashion. Based on Lauren Weisberger's best-selling novel. PG-13. Cinema World. Cinemark. Online archives.

District B13: A talented cop and a street-smart vigilante team up to save a walled-in ghetto from destruction in the latest film from producer/writer Luc Besson (The Fifth Element). Predictable but enjoyable story is lifted by the striking physical presence of leads David Belle and Cyril Raffaelli. R. Bijou LateNite. Online archives.

Fast and the Furious, The: Tokyo Drift: The series gets a new star in Lucas Black (Friday Night Lights), whose character moves to Japan and gets caught up in the underground world of drift racing. PG-13. Movies 12.

Ice Age 2: The Meltdown: Manny (Ray Romano), Sid (John Leguizamo) and Diego (Denis Leary) are back for another adventure. The animals are excited that the ice is melting — it's a paradise of water parks! But where is all that new water going to go? PG. Movies 12.

Inconvenient Truth, An: Following the 2000 election, Al Gore changed tack, turning his focus to the worldwide crisis that is global warming. Director Davis Guggenheim combines footage of Gore's traveling multimedia presentation on climate crisis with Gore's personal story, creating an effective and engaging film. PG. Bijou. Online archives.

Lake House, The: Kate (Sandra Bullock) and Alex (Keanu Reeves) are carrying on a correspondence through the mystical mailbox of a house on an Illinois lake — despite living in worlds that are two years apart. Time-challenged romance sounds kinda corny, but hey, Ebert and Roeper both liked it. PG-13. Cinemark.

Little Man: Director Keenen Ivory Wayans' new film follows a height-challenged thief (Marlon Wayans) who dresses up like a baby and gets himself adopted in order to recover a diamond. PG-13. Cinemark.

Mission Impossible 3: Can Tom Cruise dodge the mountains of press about his personal life — er, many guys with guns and explosives in his way — and save the woman he loves from an impressively creepy Philip Seymour Hoffman? R. Movies 12. Online archives.

Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest: Johnny Depp reprises his role as over-the-top swashbuckler Jack Sparrow in the second Pirates film, which we rather fervently hope is as entertaining as the first. Orlando Bloom and Keira Knightley are the in-love eye candy — actually, it's a toss-up as to which of the three leads is prettiest. With Bill Nighy all betentacled as watery bad guy Davy Jones. PG-13. Cinemark. Cinema World. Online archives.

Poseidon: When a huge wave capsizes a luxury liner on New Year's Eve, a small group of passengers must fight for their lives. Josh Lucas, Jacinda Barrett, Kurt Russell and Richard Dreyfuss star in Wolfgang Petersen's (Das Boot) remake of The Poseidon Adventure. PG-13. Movies 12. Online archives.

Princess Bride, The: Pirates, farm boys, princesses, rodents of unusual size, the six-fingered-man, and Cary Elwes before he started starring in things like Saw. Have fun storming the castle, and even more fun revisiting a time when romantic comedies were this good. PG. Bijou LateNite.

RV: In Barry Sonnenfeld's latest film, Robin Williams tells his family they're going on vacation to Hawaii — but instead packs his wife and kids into an RV and heads to Colorado. Jeff Daniels heads up a wacky bunch of full-time campers. It's a sure bet there are hijinks involved. PG-13. Movies 12.

Superman Returns: At long last, the man of steel returns to movie screens — and to Earth. In director Bryan Singer's new film, Superman's been gone five long years, during which his former flame Lois Lane has had a son and found a new fellow. Oh, and Lex Luthor is out of prison. Starring Brandon Routh as the man in tights, Kate Bosworth as Lois and Kevin Spacey as Lex. PG-13. Cinemark. Online archives.

Wild, The: Keifer Sutherland and Janeane Garofalo are among the actors voicing critters on a quest to rescue one of their own, who somehow got accidentally shipped off to the jungle. Madagascar, anyone? (William Shatner appears as a wicked wildebeest.) G. Movies 12.

X-Men: The Last Stand: The third X-Men movie combines the loved-by-fans "Dark Phoenix" storyline with the discovery of a "cure" for mutancy. Hugh Jackman, Halle Berry, Famke Janssen and the rest of the core cast return (sans Nightcrawler, oddly). Stay through the credits for a vital scene. PG-13. Movies 12. Online archives.

You, Me and Dupree: Kate Hudson and Matt Dillon star as a newly married couple whose new life together takes a sharp turn when perpetual bachelor Dupree (perpetual scene-stealer Owen Wilson) crashes at their place. But it's just for a little while. Right? PG-13. Cinema World. Cinemark.

Ryan's Lucky Number 13

Walker T. Ryan releases "new" cd to acclaim.

As many musicians do, Eugene's Walker T. Ryan came to the blues through folk music. Ryan's father was an actor who moved the family from California to New York when Ryan was in high school. He landed smack in the middle of the Greenwich Village folk scene, which was exploding at the time with the likes of Dylan and Baez. After graduation, Ryan returned to the West Coast, where he merged with yet another vibrant music scene, that of Claremont, Calif., breeding ground for Zappa, Captain Beefheart, David Lindley and more recently, Ben Harper.

"I started out as a folkie, got a guitar in my hands when I was 12 and was fortunate enough to find ways to stick with it," Ryan said. "The Greenwich Village folk scene was incredibly integrated, and a lot of what I came to in terms of folk music came through the civil rights movement because my parents were active in that," Ryan said. "That's where a lot of us heard black spirituals for the first time."

From Woody Guthrie and The Kingston Trio to Pete Seeger and Leadbelly, Ryan was finding his own style while taking in the "astonishing music scene" he was surrounded by in California. "From the get go, blues was what I was attracted to, whether it was the first wave of rock and roll or the bluesy stuff whether it was Appalachian or the Southern blues that I heard in folk music."

Ryan's newest CD, 13, is a solo album — "me and the guitar," he said — of half originals and half covers of songs he likes. It's called 13 for a few reasons, "One, it has 13 takes on it," he said. "I was born on Friday the 13th and always thought of it as a lucky number. And it's an obscure reference to a calling card that Howlin' Wolf had once upon a time."

'I started out as a folkie, got a guitar in my hands when I was 12 and was fortunate enough to find ways to stick with it.'

— Walker T. Ryan

Ryan is mostly known for his Delta blues but said that on 13, the covers are a little more Chicago-style blues than he usually does. "I did a Jimmy Reed tune, 'I Found True Love,' and I always try and do a Lightnin' Hopkins tune because he's one of the principle influences I work from."

Ryan moved to Eugene 19 years ago to be near his daughter, playing locally during that time, but giving up his extensive road touring. The CD was actually released in the spring, but Ryan is celebrating 13 now because he never held an official release party here in his hometown. He anticipates the release of another CD around Christmas. That one, The High Desert Church of the Mojo Hand, was recorded in Santa Fe by Kenny Passarelli, former bass player for Elton John and noted blues producer.

Ryan is enjoying some "marvelous" coverage for 13 in the current issue of a British magazine called Blues Matters. "It's a seven page interview next to a seven page interview about Bonnie Raitt," Ryan said. "It knocked me out!" Blues Matters raves about 13, saying Ryan's own compositions stand up alongside those by Lightnin' Hopkins and Jimmy Reed and that he also offers "fresh and original" covers while retaining the "magic" of the originals.

Ryan will release 13 at Papa's Soul Food Kitchen (newly moved to Whitaker), which specializes in BBQ and down-home Southern-style cooking. Papa's has found a niche nurturing the acoustic blues scene. "This guy is amazing," said Ryan about Papa. Walker's release show also inaugurates Papa's newly-expanded deck with a stage, a comfortable atmosphere to take in food, drink and music. "It's a very nice scene they're opening up there," Ryan said. "It's a good match, we're both having a good time doing this!" Papa's Soul Food Kitchen will host Ryan in an all ages dinner show with no cover, then later in the night drummer Tony Figoli will join Walker for "The Down in the Bottom Blues Dance and Ramble," with special food offerings throughout the evening.

A MILLION/BILLION REASONS TO GO

Why should you go see a Million/Billion show? "'Cause we're the best band in the world," says guitarist and lead singer Gavin Bellour with all the tongue-in-cheek humility of a budding rock star. While critics haven't gone quite that far, the L.A.-based trio could be the next big thing. Their eclectic blend of folksy indie rock, pop tempos and the occasional country-flavored twinge of harmonica caught the attention of URB magazine earlier this year, and their debut album, Ready. Fire. Aim., got a four-star review. BMI also recently chose Million/Billion as their "Pick of the Month."

Bellour says the band members' diverse influences have merged to create a sound that is hard to define. "I think you could pretty much list any genre and it would fit in somewhere," Bellour says. More important to Million/Billion than labels, however, is substance. "There's no outfit you can't dress a good song in, as long as you communicate and you reach people," he says. The ambiguity hasn't hindered the band's success, as they have recently shared bills with such popular and widely divergent artists as Beck, Ray Lamontagne and Shooter Jennings. "The record is one thing," says Bellour, "but there's an energy that we bring to the stage that is really fun and really infectious. We've never had an audience be disappointed with us."

Million/Billion plays at 7 pm Friday, July 21 at Cozmic Pizza. $7. — Martha Calhoon

CENTERPIECE OF THE PUZZLE

When J.L. Stiles plays the blues, it really doesn't matter if he's onstage by himself with just a guitar and harmonica or rocking out louder with a full band. He projects all of his sounds with tenacity and the passion of the best of old American blues and jam music.

"The great thing about a solo act that I would incorporate is the element of one guitar and one voice can indicate so many different things in music," says Stiles. "With a band, it's more like fitting pieces together and actually making a sound. And that actually opens up more difficulties in the studio because it takes more time and commitment to get the sounds you want out onto the CD."

Stiles brought together a full band for his latest release, Land of the Plenty, a much fuller and lyrically different album than his solo album, Solo Sessions. "This new album has a lot more of a political edge than the last one," he says. "It's like we're living in the land of the plenty, but the album is like the fall of this land."

J.L. Stiles plays with Grand Street and Rob and Darius at 9 pm Wednesday, July 26 at Sam Bond's. $3-$5. — Dan Hoyt

ARRESTED DEVELOPMENT

The Cops have a duty: To make classic punk fun again. Their sleek, smart approach to punk blends the message of The Clash in with the attitude of the Buzzcocks and the style of the Velvet Underground. It's old and has been repeated by hundreds of bands over the past 30+ years, but these Seattle rockers make it fresh in a way most bands can't.

"We want to write songs that are edgy, tough and gritty," says guitarist/vocalist Mike Jaworski. "But we also want to write songs that make people want to dance, have sex and start a revolution all at the same time!"

In November of 2005, the band put out their full-length debut, Get Good or Stay Bad. The record is simple instrumentation combined with a bitter swagger at its finest. But on the band's sophomore effort, Jaworski says, The Cops won't be doing the same thing twice.

"We wanted to showcase that we're a great live band with the first record, because it's one of our strengths," says Jaworski. "This next record will be a little different than straight punk rock. I mean, we still consider ourselves to be punk rock, but this next record will be a little bit messier."

The Cops play with the Low Haunts at 10 pm Thursday, July 27 at Luckey's. $3.

SUCCESS 94.9 is locally owned and operated by Diamond Peak Media.

Theater BY SUZI STEFFEN

Piglet (Sarah Schull) and Pooh (Joe Oyala) try to cheer up Eeyore (Sarah Ragle).

Sweetness Follows

A Winnie-the-Pooh Birthday Tail perfect for little tykes.

Rounding the corner of the UO's Robinson Theatre, following the "Mad Duckling Box Office this way!" signs, a person — child or adult — might stop with glee to read the giant map of the "100 Aker Wood." The Hundred-Acre Wood, as any child could explain, is the mythical home of Christopher Robin's stuffed animals when they're living their real lives. It's where Rabbit's relations multiply, where Owl peers out testily, where Pooh finds his way to the Bee Tree. In the Mad Duckling production of A Winnie-the-Pooh Birthday Tail, most of the favorites appear.

Much singing marks this production although the songs won't be familiar (maybe Disney has a copyright on "It's a Wonderful Thing About Tiggers"?). Piglet (Sarah Schull), Christopher Robin (Joe Doyle) and Tigger/Owl (Melissa Walther) carry the songs; when Eeyore/Kanga (Sarah Ragle) has a signature moment, well, let's just say that Richard Harris in Camelot also spoke a lot of his songs. The story's not quite compelling, though well-known to the Pooh crowd: Eeyore, depressed, loses her tail just before her birthday party, and Eeyore's friends swear to find it. The looking rambles — the play might better be called How to Get to Owl's House in More than 45 Minutes — but there are amusing moments, especially the song in which Rabbit (Steve Wehmeier) dreams of a life as a commanding presence.

The most successful moments come when performers fan out and engage young audience members and when the kids begin to interact. For instance, the tail is revealed late in the show, but Pooh (Joseph Oyala) doesn't quite see it until the groundswell of informative little voices ("There's the tail! THAT'S THE TAIL!!!") grows too large to ignore.

It's somewhat disconcerting to see an older adult dressed in gray sweatpants as Rabbit or a younger adult with a pronounced (fake) beer belly playing Pooh Bear, but the medium-little kids (aged late 3 to 7) seemed well equipped to deal with a certain suspension of disbelief. The younger ones acted frightened, the older ones bored. But that leaves a lot of years in between. Bring a blanket, sunblock, snacks and drinks, and, if your wee one is celebrating a birthday, be sure to let someone with Mad Duckling know ahead of the show.

A Winnie-the-Pooh Birthday Tail runs through July 22. Performances on the lawn outside the UO's Robinson Theater begin at

LOL

Eugene Mirman's comedy kills.

If you are of a certain age or television demographic, you may remember comedian Michael Showalter from such roles as "Doug," the stoner who repeatedly proclaimed, "I'm Doug, and I'm ouuuutta heeeere!" on MTV's brilliant, short-lived "The State." Showalter was often the State's fall guy, never as smooth as Thomas Lennon or as smirking as Michael Ian Black (whom you've now seen on approximately 7,021 VH1 specials, not to mention those weird Sierra Mist commercials). Later, Showalter, Black and David Wain went on to form Stella.

Stella! For one summer, my roommates and I spent our Wednesday nights blowing wads of cash at the New York bar Stella called home, coughing up $7 for obscenely good cocktails to meet the two-drink minimum. Stella was billed as "big room comedy" and often involved cleverness, embarrassment, crudity and guest stars (Jon Stewart, Janeane Garofalo, Colin Quinn). Sometimes it was sketch comedy, sometimes videos. The best way to understand Stella is to head to www.collegehumor.com/features/stella and watch a few of the latter. "Turkey Hunting," "Dickfish" — the classics.

OK, so it's a certain kind of humor: snarky, wry, dry, dirty, un-PC. As is that of Eugene Mirman, with whom Showalter is currently on tour. Mirman's website, www.eugenemirman.com, greets visitors with a creepy crooning child. His video section is half hysterical and half the kind of jokes that go on just a little too long to be comfortable, which seems to be one of Mirman's things. But his new CD, En Garde, Society!, is, well, funny. Really funny. The kind of funny that can't be explained by quotes. It's all in the delivery, which in Mirman's case is a chatty, casual tone that sounds oddly like television sci-fi mastermind Joss Whedon. Mirman riffs on pop culture, advertising, politics, people and Jack-in-the-Box's disconcerting claim that its food is "real." His truth or dare bit (in which a caveman asks a cavewoman what her fantasy is; she replies, "Agriculture") had me spitting gin and tonic across my kitchen. Have you ever laughed yourself spitting when you're home alone? It feels weird. So go to the WOW Hall and laugh with other fans of hipster comedy instead. Because you can. As Mirman says, "Freedom: Let's share the shit out of it." EW

SHAMANIC HEALING

Shamanic Healing addresses the spiritual aspects of physical, mental and emotional illness. Possible symptoms calling for Shamanic Intervention are:

- not feeling whole • "part of me left" or "I haven't been the same since" • chronic illness, depression or fatigue • addictions • feelings of possession, darkness, or alienation

A one time Healing Empowerment Ceremony can address the issues & restore the integrity of the soul force. There is also a monthly drumming & journey circle to support your ongoing process

We are a group of professional Massage Therapists who would like to take the opportunity to say thank you to all of the loyal clients we have had the pleasure to see over the last few years. We have all been members of a great team, each one of us formerly on staff at one of Eugene's largest downtown spas.

We hope this list will help you to quickly find your favorite LMT. All of us are still in practice in the local area and welcome the chance to work with each of you again. You may reach any one of us at the numbers listed below.

PLEASE ACCEPT THIS COUPON FOR 10% OFF A GREAT MASSAGE, AND HAVE A WONDERFUL SUMMER.

RONNY ALWAYS watched in silence. He measured his breaths so his rhythm didn't deviate. In and out, slowly, but without a pause. Breath became background. He found it best to watch from the bushes. Business folk passed by unaware they were being stalked. Children played without fear. Lovers caressed on the benches with abandon. Ronny saw it all. He became so good at avoiding notice that he started daring himself. He'd sit silently, slowly removing his clothes. When watching in the nude wasn't enough, he started breaking his code of silence. He whispered as people passed, whistled while children played, and practiced magic while lovers wrestled. He found peace

free will astrology BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): I'm pleased to announce the imminent arrival of a new chapter in your own personal soap opera. It could include any of the following plot twists: midnight confessions, madcap sex farces, thumb-sucking saints, an invitation to play leapfrog with a unicorn, work turning into play and vice versa, a showdown between the reptile brain and mammalian brain, a chance to bob for lollipops in a fountain, a thunderstorm coming just in time to douse a raging fire, samurais wearing pajamas, a supernatural ham sandwich, and opportunities to tinker with your "Me Against the World" attitude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Has a baby ever been born with two umbilical cords? If so, he or she would be a good symbol for you in the coming weeks. Why? Because you should be extremely aggressive about getting the nurturing you need – even to the point of double-dipping from a primal source. In my astrological opinion, it's your responsibility to make sure you're flooded with blessings. Trust your unprecedented hunger.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Kathleen Raine (1908-2003) was a brilliant Cambridge-educated scholar and poet who won numerous awards for her poetry in the U.K. and France. Many of her colleagues were towering intellectuals, but she herself wanted "to get away from the Sherlock Holmes misconception that everything has a rational explanation." She gravitated instead toward "the sacred springs of life, which are the imagination and the heart." She's your role model right now, Gemini. I hope she'll inspire you to apply all of your high-powered ingenuity to an exploration of soul-awakening mysteries that can't be encapsulated with neat analyses. It's a perfect moment for you to celebrate the indescribable bounty of fertile chaos.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Are there influences that render you numb or even dumb? What experiences tend to shut you down? When you're gliding along in your natural rhythm, are you sometimes interrupted by blips that make you feel lost and unresponsive? According to my reading of the astrological omens, Cancerian, you now have extra power to fight back against these little outbreaks of black magic. It's a perfect moment to get the upper hand on anything that closes you off from the world or locks you away from your own intuition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The Hebrew word "shalom" is both a hello infused with a goodbye and a goodbye leavened with a hello. That's why it would be wise and fun for you to make it your word of power in the coming days. You'll be spinning through a transitional zone in which it won't always be clear which direction is up. You'll be coming and going simultaneously, embarking on new journeys and ending old ones. Whenever you say "shalom," whether it's a greeting to someone else or a mantra uttered in solitude, you'll remind yourself that the threshold you're in is pregnant with a thousand possibilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some scientists believe our brains are in a continual state of war. Writing in LiveScience.com, Bjorn Carey reports that our grey matter is a battleground where competing thoughts and impulses struggle for supremacy, brawling and jousting for our undivided attention. I have reason to believe that this ruckus will be far more pronounced than usual for you in the coming weeks, Virgo. All of your pairs of opposites will intensify their conflict, with each side clamoring and maneuvering to be declared winner. What I recommend may surprise you. I think you should just sit back with amused tolerance and let them fight it out. There really is no pressing need for you to be anything other than a radiant bundle of fascinating contradictions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): I'm not a big fan of excessive decorum. That's why I'm opposed to the efforts by some professional tennis officials to stop the spread of grunting among female tennis players. The great Monica Seles started the trend some years ago, emitting war cries as she struck the ball, and since then many other players have made it a part of their game. This is a favorable time for you to experiment with what they have discovered: that making loud mouth noises loosens your inhibitions, boosts your confidence, and lubricates your power. Liberate your GRUNT, Libra!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In preparation for my public readings and performances, I often ask my hosts to make sure that there are pussy willows and pomegranates placed near the podium, along with a pint of absinthe, a jump rope woven from hemp for use in my interactive rituals, and a box of slave-free, non-GMO, organic vegan chocolates. What about you, Scorpio? What items would you demand in your rider if you were asked to speak about your philosophy of life to a curious audience? It's an ideal time to meditate on this matter. According to my astrological analysis, you will soon be in the spotlight, and will have openings to ask for what you want with aggressive clarity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Austin artist Scott Wade likes to let layers of dust collect on the rear window of his car. That allows him to express his specialty: detailed "paintings" carved out of the dust with his fingers and paintbrushes. The most exquisite of his temporary masterpieces was a black-and-white reproduction of one of the famous "Dogs Playing Poker" paintings. I recommend you make Wade your role model, Sagittarius. Create unexpected wonders and exuberant curiosities out of stuff that's used in a different way than it's "supposed" to be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): I recently found out there's a famous guy out there with a name similar to mine. Rob Brzezinski is an administrator for pro football's Minnesota Vikings. He's regarded as a "cap guru," meaning he's highly skilled at manipulating the National Football League's Byzantine "cap" system of rules about how much money a team can spend on its players. That's pretty funny given the fact that I've been working really hard in the last few months to become a "Cappy guru," by which I mean someone who understands Capricorns really well. I mention this because it's prime time for you to seek out and learn from people who are to you what Rob Brzezinski is to me: your counterpart, soul twin, shadow, doppelganger, or other half.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Imagine asking fundamentalist nutcase Jerry Falwell to evaluate a book about evolution by a renowned science writer like Richard Dawkins. Imagine handing poet Allen Ginsberg's masterwork Howl to a janitor in Bangladesh and paying him to write his opinions about it. The effect would be similar to an event that actually occurred recently. The New York Times invited ex-Marine sniper Anthony Swofford, author of the Gulf War memoir Jarhead, to review a subversive metaphysical experiment penned by visionary philosopher Daniel Pinchbeck. As you might expect, Swofford's screed was 85 percent hallucination. Let the Times' gaffe serve as a warning beacon, Aquarius. It's now crucial for you to gather a range of discriminating opinions about yourself and the possibilities you're considering. Don't rely on people who have no familiarity with, understanding of, or respect for the issues you want feedback about.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Neurologist Oliver Sacks writes books in which he describes the ingenious adaptations some of his patients have made when faced with limitations that other people might have found debilitating. One example is an artist whose car accident caused him to lose his ability to see any other colors besides black and white. In response, he became a specialist in creating black and white paintings, and ultimately developed a mastery that won him acclaim. Later, when offered a chance to undergo treatment to restore the full spectrum of vision, he declined. Take heart from his story, Pisces. The coming weeks will be an excellent time for you, too, to capitalize on one of your seeming liabilities or inadequacies.
